Roosevelt Cautions Dies On Acting Prematurely

Fears 5th Column Drive Might Be Upset; Communist Aims Told in Report

President Roosevelt has cautioned Representative Martin Dies against premature disclosures of facts of Fifth Column activities uncovered by the Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

Such disclosures, the President feels, may severely handicap or even set at naught the plans of the regular administrative agencies for breaking up subversive plots.

This was revealed yesterday when the White House released the text of a telegram to Dies, in Orange, Tex., inviting him to a White House conference on Friday. Dies has accepted and is on his way to Washington.

At the same time, the Dies Committee made public a 967-page "Red Book" on communism which outlined the "party line," showing the nature and aims of the Communist Party in this country and its connection with the comintern.

Release Date Broken

The "Red Book" was originally scheduled for release and publication on December 1. However, through a lack of warning that it was a secret document, the public printer advertised surplus copies for sale to the public and many copies were sold at $1 per copy while others were sent to libraries on the printer's mailing list. This effectively broke the release date.

Among other things, the compilation gives 281 instances where violence in achieving the overthrow of capitalism has been advocated, although violence is now assiduously played down by the Communist press as part of the Communist scheme of things.

Advised to Work Within Army

The book also shows numerous instances, either in the form of resolutions of the party, of the comintern or of Communist writers, where party followers are advised to work within the Army, the Navy, the transport unions, the munitions factories and in all other possible ways to hamstring and sabotage "imperialist war" and to turn "imperialist war" into civil war and revolution. The chief meaning of "imperialist war," as seen from the documents, is war which is directed or may be directed against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Robert E. Stripling, secretary of the Dies Committee, said this so-called "Red Paper" could serve as the basis for any future moves by States to outlaw the Communist party as a legal political party as

Towerman Saved By Leap in Wreck Of Pennsy Freight

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 27 (AP).—Half of an 80-car northbound Pennsylvania freight train was derailed just south of the Wilmington Station late today, knocking down a signal tower and causing a fire that destroyed the tower and at least two of the cars.

The towerman, Henry Kerne, of Wilmington, saw the cars heading toward the building and leaped 25 feet to safety out a window. Neither Kerne nor any of the train crew was injured.

Both northbound tracks were torn up for 300 feet. Traffic on the main line was blocked, necessitating the detouring of passenger trains on a branch freight line.

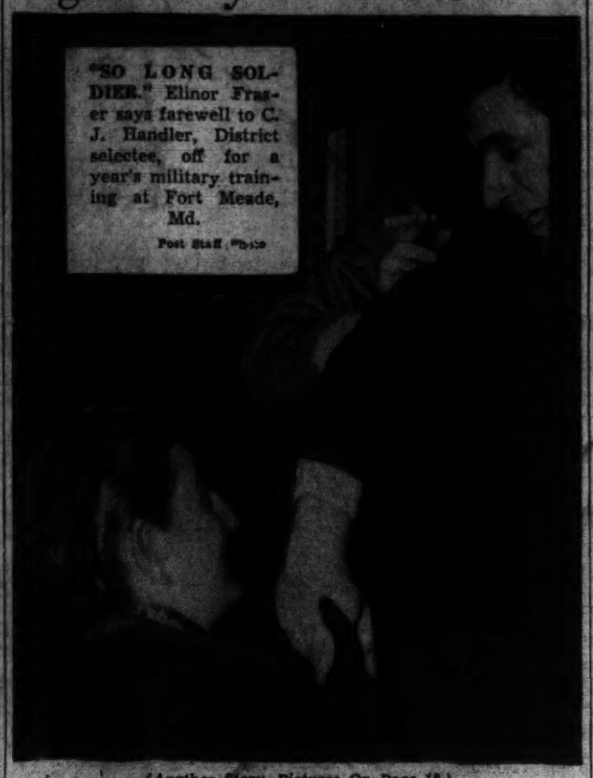
First Contingent of D. C. Selects Begins Army Life at Meade



"SO LONG SOLDIER." Elinor Fraser says farewell to C. J. Handler, District selectee, off for a year's military training at Fort Meade, Md.

Twenty-seven Washington men, one-hour-old soldiers in the United States Army, last night marched through Union Station and entrained for Fort George C. Meade, Md. One hour later they were beginning their new life for a year.

The 27, first District residents to be called up for military training under the Selective Service Act, were the remainder of 32 Class 1-A registrants who had gone through the induction steps involving rigorous physical examinations.

The new soldiers from the Capital raised their hands and pledged allegiance to the Government and the Army one hour before their departure at 8:45 last night. Physical checkups and farewell ceremonies had delayed the entrainment scheduled for midafternoon.

C. I. O. to Seek Higher Wages In Plane Plants

Immediate Campaign Planned in 4 Other California Factories

By the United Press

Downey, Calif., Nov. 27.—An immediate campaign to "raise pay throughout the aircraft industry up to automobile wage rates" was announced tonight by Windham Mortimer, national organizer for the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers' Union.

Mortimer said the union, granted an increase in the basic minimum hourly rate at the Vultee aircraft plant from 50 to 62½ cents an hour as the result of a 12-day strike that ended last night, would open negotiations shortly with four other southern California companies for similar wage boosts.

"Our victory at Vultee smashes the 50-cent minimum in the industry," Mortimer said.

The next union aircraft plant objective will be the Ryan Aeronautical Co. in San Diego, where 1,000 workers are employed. Afterward the union will seek contracts with North American Aviation, Los Angeles, employing 7,000; Menasco Manufacturing, Inglewood, 1,000, and the Harvill Aircraft Die Casting Corporation, Los Angeles, 800.

Southern California aircraft factories, choked with more than $800,000,000 worth of orders for military aircraft for the United States and Great Britain, employ about 45,000 workers. Mortimer made no mention of Lockheed Aircraft and Douglas Aircraft, two largest in this area.

Workers Seek 'Lost Battalion' Of Chest Givers

Final Impetus Urged By Headquarters For District Quota

Reports of Community Chest Workers, to be made at the Willard Hotel today and Tuesday, are expected to show a big advance toward wiping out a $270,000 deficit in funds given and pledged for Chest agencies in 1941.

"There is a 'lost battalion' of givers somewhere in Washington to whom the Community Chest must look for human needs," drive headquarters announced last night.

Unit chairmen were unanimous in their belief that many would-be givers had not been seen "because of the sheer physical job involved in reaching them at their business offices, factories or homes."

A. G. Neal, group unit chairman, pointed to the fact there are 3,000 fewer donors through his unit this year than last, and he said he believed many additional would come in.

"Apparently business is so good this year," Neal asserted, "that many firms have delayed their Community Chest returns because of lack of time to get complete coverage of their employes."

He asked that a "supreme effort" be made to round up reports and send them to drive headquarters at the Willard Hotel.

Group unit returns Tuesday stood at 45,040 pledges for $598,207, or 89.5 per cent of quota.

The additional Government pay day covered in the extended drive,

$60,000 Damages Asked

Iran Arms Buyer Stole Wife's Love, D. C. Man Says in Suit

James Lewis Jones, engineer, 6317 Georgia Avenue Northwest, charged yesterday that Maj. Rahim Shaltchi, head of a military mission from Iran, stole the love of his attractive brunette wife when she was a secretary at the Iranian Legation.

Jones asked $60,000 damages in a complaint filed in the District Court by his attorney, Paul A. Goodin.

The complaint said Jones and Mrs. Miriam Shimoon Jones were married in Muskogee, Okla., November 25, 1937, and lived happily until a year ago, when Mrs. Jones was associated with Maj. Shaltchi at the legation.

Maj. Shaltchi then had just come to Washington as head of a mission sent to buy military planes, plane engines, ammunition, guns and other war materials.

The complaint said the couple met at the legation in October and that then Maj. Shaltchi maliciously and wrongfully undertook to and did alienate the love and affections" of Mrs. Jones from her husband.

This was accomplished, the complaint said, by frequent social engagements together until Mrs. Jones left her legation job in December, 1939. Then, said the complaint, Maj. Shaltchi took an apartment in the 1700 block of N Street Northwest and induced Mrs. Jones to visit there "to study the French Language."

Mrs. Jones became angry, the complaint said, when her husband protested that this was improper and urged her to have the lessons at the Jones home. Maj. Shaltchi, said the complaint, urged Mrs. Jones to leave her husband and obtain a divorce, but as far as could be learned she had not filed a suit.

Mrs. Jones was reported out of the city. Maj. Shaltchi, whose home is 1717 Twentieth Street Northwest, could not be reached. The Iranian Legation said he was in New York on business.

Hellenes Push On In South Despite Foes' Stubborn Effort to Rally

By Max Harrelson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Athens, Nov. 27.—The Italians' stubborn resistance on the southern sector of the Albanian front with the aid of reinforcements of fresh troops and planes sent from Italy was declared tonight in military dispatches to have been broken after fierce fighting.

The Greeks, said a government spokesman, thus were "advancing in a quite satisfactory manner, mopping up the terrain."

Before the town of Pogradetz, Albania, which lies some 20 miles to the north of the strategic and captured Albanian base of Koritza, the Greeks crushed a "systematically fortified" opposition, he added.

R. A. F. Balks Reinforcements

"Thanks to British aviation the reinforcements intended to bolster the Italian troops (in that area) have been unable to reach their destination."

Further Greek advances were claimed generally in the northern and central sectors.

A British Royal Air Force communique said "highly successful raids" had been made yesterday on the Albanian port of Valona, on the Adriatic and opposite the port of Otranto, from which Italian troops and supplies presumably had been sent.

The communique said bombs hit a big ship which appeared to be sinking as the planes retired, and that damage also was inflicted on quays, the dock area and airport buildings, despite heavy antiaircraft fire and the presence of Fascist fighting planes.

The Greek high command limited its communique to the statement that Greek troops "continue with success in Albanian territory."

Hellenes Pushed Back

Ochrid, Yugoslavia (On the Albanian Frontier), Nov. 27 (AP).—Greek troops attempting a flanking movement on Pogradetz, Albania, were reported pushed back tonight and Italians were said to be holding their lines along the Cerava River approximately 5 miles south of the city.

Meanwhile Greek and British planes bombed the road from Pogradetz to Cerava village south of

Mercury Riding For a Fall to 32 Is D. C. Forecast

Washington and its environs escaped the bite of freezing temperatures and snow that hit most of the North yesterday but forecasters expected the mercury to drop to the 32 degree mark here today.

No snow is in sight for this area, according to Weather Bureau forecasters, although neighboring States experienced a fall of as much as six inches yesterday and the season's first snowstorm swept New York State, leaving a blanket of from two to eight inches deep.

In New York City the storm, earliest in years for the metropolis, blended snow, sleet and rain and left ankle-deep slush in its wake.

Vatican Paper Denies Pope Shares Axis View

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 27.—The Vatican City newspaper Osservatore Romano, today replied to those interpretations of the Pope's sermon on Sunday which cited it as evidence that His Holiness shares the Axis viewpoint on vital space.

It says that the pontiff meant nothing more than to reaffirm in general terms the five basic points for peace he first expounded last Christmas but which cannot be interpreted in such a special way.

Moreover, the Osservatore says that the Pope's idea of "the new order in Europe" is, as he said on Sunday, for nations to treat other, as they want to be treated themselves.

Duce's Warships Flee for Bases In Long-Range Battle Off Sicily

London, Nov. 27.—British naval forces in the Mediterranean today engaged two Italian battleships which were accompanied by an undetermined number of cruisers and destroyers, according to a communique issued tonight by admiralty officials. Officials declined to state whether there were casualties on either side.

The communique said: "Immediately on becoming aware of the approach of our forces the enemy altered his course and retired at high speed toward his base. Our forces pursued and it is known that they engaged the enemy at extreme range. No further information is presently available but full details will be announced as soon as possible."

The announcement recalled the sea fight on July 9, when the British commander in chief of the Mediterranean fleet, Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, reported a "disappointing action" in which Italian naval vessels fled until they were within sight of their own bases.

Nazi Supply Ships Sunk

In another phase of Britain's offensive, Royal Air Force heavy bombers in the past twenty-four hours carried out a multiple attack on Axis forces, torpedoing two supply ships off the Frisian islands and bombarding German Naval bases from Rotterdam to Lorient.

The official air ministry reports indicate this was one of the heaviest and most successful raids of recent weeks. Five bombers did not return.

Starting last evening at dusk and ending some time this afternoon, this raid on the continent was divided into five main sorties.

The first large force concentrated its fire on the Royal arsenal at Turin, "greatly increasing the damage of the last four nights," according to the air ministry.

Raider in Indian Ocean

A second force bombed the German capital's heavily-burdened railroads. Armaments factories, electric power plants, rail communications and warehouses were attacked by a third formation of raiders in the vicinity of Cologne.

Shipping and docks were attacked throughout the night at Rotterdam, Flushing, Antwerp, Ghent, Calais, Boulogne and Lorient in the fourth sortie. As usual, Lorient received special attention, dive-bombers being used in an attempt to wipe out this German submarine base.

The last raid, and, officials said one of the most successful phases of the general attack, was carried out by a lone raider of the coastal command in a "roving mission"

'Industry Has Suffered'

Commons Told Britain Faces Peril as Grave as in 1917

Greenwood Says Germans Are Better Able to Blockade Isles Than in Last War; Decline in Shipping Tonnage Admitted

By Raymond Daniell

London, Nov. 27.—A highly important House of Commons debate on the British war effort and its shortcomings indicated today that this nation's leaders are not kidding themselves about the dangers confronting these islands.

On the contrary, Arthur Greenwood, minister without portfolio, replying to critics, confessed he wished the situation were different, but held it to be unavoidable and said that with the help of North America he was confident of the outcome and viewed the future undismayed.

Greenwood conceded that industry has suffered from German bombs, and more important,, that British shipbuilding has lagged somewhat, so that the nation's total tonnage now, counting accretions from allied nations, is less than when the war broke out.

Greenwood even went so far as to say in open debate in Parliament which under its rules is not subject to censorship, that Britain's shipping situation today is much as it was in April, 1917, when this country's stock fell to its lowest point in the last war.

Germany, he said, was in a better position now than in 1917 to carry on undersea and air war against this country's seaborne trade, but he expressed confidence that the Admiralty and other services would find ways of combatting the menace.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, former War Secretary and long a critic of Government policy, joined Emanuel Shinwell, Laborite, who started the whole discussion by expressing concern over rising unemployment, lag in replacements of lost tonnage

Uruguayan Deputies Vote Base for U. S.

Navy Could Enter Montevideo Port In Joint Defense

By John W. White

Montevideo, Nov. 27.—The Uruguayan Chamber of Deputies tonight approved the government's offer to place Montevideo at the disposition of the United States and other American nations as a naval base, in case threat of non-American aggression requires measures for joint action to defend the continent.

The minister of national defense, Gen. Julio A. Roletti, told the chamber the United States had been asked if it were able, and on what terms it is willing, to supply Uruguay with material and equipment necessary to make Montevideo an efficient naval base.

The United States has also been asked, he said, for prices on three 1,000-ton destroyers, three minesweepers of 600 to 700 tons, five seaplanes with wide cruising range, six seaplane bombers and other planes, and three motor launches and other auxiliary vessels.

In ratifying the government's policy, the Chamber of Deputies approved intercontinental defense discussions with the United States on condition that any naval or aeronaval bases that will be constructed in Uruguayan territory will be under the complete control and supervision of Uruguay.

Last week the Uruguayan Senate voted its disapproval of the government's conversations regarding Proposals for extending credit to Britain will be considered early in the next session of Congress, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, announced yesterday.

George said the committee postponed until next session action on two resolutions introduced by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, to amend the Johnson and Neutrality Acts to enable Britain to borrow here. Also tabled until January was a proposal by Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, for Congressional investigation of British credits and resources in this country.

2-Week-Old Boy Is Left on Steps Of Orphange

A blue-eyed, brown-haired boy about two weeks old was left on the steps of St. John's Orphanage, 1922 F Street Northwest, last night.

Miss Lois Townsend, a nurse, heard the baby's wails and went to the door.

She opened it, and there on the cold steps was a tiny bundle of blue. The foundling was snug in a warm blue blanket and wore a blue bonnet and pink wrap.

The child found no permanent haven, however, at the orphanage. As is customary, he was sent to Gallinger Hospital, where physicians said he was in good health and had not suffered from exposure.

Gorgeous Gerta Strip-Teases Her Way Back Into Movies

Hollywood, Nov. 27.—Gerta Rozen stripped down to her black brassiere and black lace panties today with such a threatening gesture that she won her strike against two red-faced movie producers and the enthusiastic approval of hundreds of goggle-eyed watchers.

The statuesque blonde, who had been "strip-picketing" Universal Studio for three days because she was cut from a picture, took off her slip and was fingering her brassiere when Producers David Loew and Albert Lewis bundled her in an overcoat and rushed her out of sight.

Besides her slight attire, Miss Rozen wore a sign: "Unfair to Gerta Rozen." She claimed her face was left on the cutting room floor when his film was edited.

Miss Rozen took off her blouse on the first day of her strike—"the only protest a weak woman can make"—and doffed her skirt yesterday. When she and hundreds of witnesses appeared before the studio today, Producers Loew and Lewis bit their nails and paced the floor.

Finally they could stand it no longer. They rushed out, tossed Loew's coat around the trim-rigged Gerta.

"You are heaping ridicule upon the producers of a serious and profound motion picture," Loew told her, "but if you'll quit, we'll either put you back in the picture or give you a part in our next one."

Gerta pulled the coat around her—it isn't midsummer here any more—and agreed.

"O. K., gentlemen," she said. "If you keep your promise, but if you don't I'll take up where I left off—and gentlemen, you know where I left off."

D. C. Man Returns To Reich, Loses U. S. Citizenship

Ernst Gotthilf Umbach, 45, a butcher at Heilbronn, Wuerttemberg, Germany, lost his American citizenship yesterday because he went back to Germany to live within five years after he was naturalized here.

Umbach, who lived at 630 Fifth Street Northeast, was naturalized in the District Court May 2, 1933. About August 20, 1935, he went to Germany, accompanied by his wife who had not become an American citizen.

Justice Bolitha J. Laws, of the District Court, signed an order revoking Umbach's American citizenship after the facts were presented by District Attorney Edward M. Curran.

At Least 64 Slain As Iron Guard Avenges Murder Of Codreanu

Written in Blood

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Nov. 27.—Hotheads of Rumania's ascendant Iron Guard slew 64, and perhaps more, political prisoners in Bucharest's Jilava prison today in bloody vengeance for the killing of their leader, Corneliu Codreanu, two years ago.

Stern disapproval by both Premier-Dictator Gen. Ion Antonescu and the present Iron Guard leader, Vice Premier Horia Sima, was expressed in a terse government communique which officially announced the unofficial purge after several hours of silence.

New York, Nov. 27 (A.P.). All communication with Bucharest was cut off tonight, the British radio announced in a broadcast heard here by N. B. C.

The communique stated simply that "some political prisoners" were shot dead by "legionnaires" (Iron Guards) who were exhuming the bodies of Codreanu and 14 of his followers from the prison courtyard where they were buried in the regime of King Carol.

Number Killed Not Given

It said those shot were "considered principally responsible for the crime against Codreanu and other legionnaires under the last regime."

It did not give the number killed or any other details, but unofficial reports said there were 64. (A report carried in Berlin by DNB, official German news agency, said that a number of additional former political leaders had been shot during the day in Rumania in addition to 64 already known to have been slain. Among these latest victims of the purge, the dispatch added, was a former secretary general of the National Peasant Party named Magdeanu.)

pest through diplomatic channels gave these grim details:

(A few hours before dawn, several hundred unidentified men thrust their way into the prison in the Transylvanian foothills, seized the keys from the guards, and swiftly unlocked the cells, one by one.

(Each prisoner they sought was called out into the dimly-lit corridor and there shot dead without ceremony.

(Some earlier reports had said they were led to the brink of Codreanu's grave in the yard for the execution.

(Listed among the victims were a former premier, Gen. George Argesanu, former Minister of Security Gen. Gabriel Marinescu, former Military Intelligence Chief Gen. Bengliu, former Supreme Court President Radu Pascu, and Gen. Moruzow, credited with building up King Carol's espionage system. All were high in the councils of the ousted Carol regime.)

The affair has its genesis in the Iron Guard's early struggles for power, when, on November 30, 1938, Codreanu and 13 of his imprisoned followers were killed at Jilava. The Carol regime listed their deaths as executions for attempted escape; the Iron Guard says they were strangled without provocation.

Tonight's Government communique said that after the killings this morning, former Premiers Gheorghe Tatarescu, Ion Gigurtu and Constantine Argetoianu and former War Minister Gheorghe Ilasievici were placed in protective custody but were released tonight.

No mention was made of other arrests, but scores were rumored.

Nicolas Lupu, head of the special supreme court which had been created to try the political prisoners now dead, has resigned his post.

It was reported that an Iron Guard who recently tried to help Gen. Marinescu escape from Jilava, and who was himself imprisoned, had committed suicide in his cell.

Vice Premier Sima, in appealing to the Guardists, said: "The only law must be that of saving our fatherland. Every independent action endangers the country and will be punished. I order every Legionnaire to follow the orders of his leader, who always orders what is right . . . Comrades, order and discipline are our watchwords."

Earlier, Sima renewed the pledge of guardist obedience to Gen. Antonescu.

The minister of justice meanwhile significantly directed justice department officials as well as police to stand by for possible special orders.

(Information reaching capitals outside Rumania said Antonescu was believed to have control of the sensation-fraught situation due to presence of German troops in Rumania and the fact that the Rumanian army recently was demobolized.)

Antonescu Sought Reconciliation

Budapest, Nov. 27 (AP).—In the midst of considerable dissidence, Rumanian Premier Antonescu has sought to reconcile differences among his Iron Guard followers.

Recently, in what was regarded as a revolt against the Iron Guard leader Horia Sima, Corneliu Codreanu's father, Ion, engaged in a fight with right wing guardsmen at the headquarters of the guard in Bucharest.

After a brief gun fight, it was reported Ion was taken into custody and his second son, Horia, unconfirmed reports said, was shot in a skirmish when a plot to free Gen. Marinescu from jail was frustrated.

The arrest of former Premier Gigurti occasioned some surprise, since he, as the last premier under Carol, sought to appease Iron Guard demands for an alignment with Germany.

Codreanu and his followers were killed during their imprisonment on charges of treason growing out of the assassinations of Premier Ion B. Duca, in 1933, and Mihail Stelescu, an Iron Guardist, accused of betraying the movement in 1936.

The execution followed the fatal wounding of Flory S. Goanga, rector of Cluj University, in November, 1938, an attack allegedly directed from prison by Codreanu as a signal for rebellion.

Italy Resorts To Air Attacks In Albania

Planes Bomb Bridges, Highways; Admits to British Raid on Turin

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 27.—Reforming their own battle lines in Albania, the Italians said today they had resorted to air attacks to break up Greek preparations for further assaults, slashing at highway junctions, bridges and troops and motor columns.

While acknowledging a raid on Turin, the nation's chief industrial city, on the northeastern plains of Piedmont, the high command countered recent British accounts of damage to three Fascist dreadnaughts at Taranto with a claim that Italy's own fliers had hit six warships at Alexandria, Egypt.

(A British communique declared that the raid on Turin last night set numerous fires and left the big factory town shaking with blasts from its own explosives.)

While harassing the Greek offensive, Italian bombers also raided ports on the Greek island of Corfu, just off the Albanian coast, for the second day in succession, the high command said:

"Intense attacks" were directed at "all" enemy communication lines, it was added. Highway junctions at towns along the Kalamas River Valley and elsewhere in Greece and bridges over the river were claimed to have been cut. The airfield at Ioannina, another Greek town, was attacked.

Charging that the British planes which bombed Turin came over Swiss territory, the high command reported that bombs damaged buildings in the center and outskirts of the city and killed an army sentry. A fire in a glassworks was "immediately put under control," it said. Falling in the open country, bombs wrecked two farmhouses, the high command stated.

"According to reliable information," the communique said, "the air bombardment of Alexandria Harbor carried out by our squadrons with heavy-caliber bombs November 19 seriously hit six warships, the Suez Canal Co.'s repair ship used by the enemy, and flying fields at Heluan and Abu Sceir, with four planes set afire and destroyed on the latter field."

(The nationality of the warships—whether British, French or Egyptian—was not mentioned.)

Nazi Diplomats Met Reverse, Turks Feel

Believe Ankara Has Deferred War Peril, But Continue Arming

By G. E. R. Gedye.

Copyright by New York Times

Istanbul, Nov. 27.—It is felt here tonight that a setback has been administered to Nazi plans, and that for the moment Germany has lost the initiative in this area and is engaged in a diplomatic retreat. Turkey's entry into the war, which only last week seemed to be but a matter of days, now looks like an eventuality which may be delayed for weeks or months.

Although nothing has been stated publicly concerning German Ambassador von Papen's recent conversations with Sukra Saracoglu, the Turkish foreign minister, the latter has privately made a reassuring statement to the popular party.

There is considered to be no doubt German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop trusted to von Papen Axis demands and offers to be presented in Ankara, but at the last moment the plans were changed and von Papen's return was delayed for two days for this purpose. Now von Papen is understood to be endeavoring to convince the Turks that all will be well if they can persuade their British ally not to send troops to Greece to aid in the conquering of Italy. Should the British refrain from this, von Papen is suggesting, Germany would not need to come to Italy's rescue.

Turkish Lullaby

He implies a warning that such a course might involve Turkey in the war. Thus Germany is only pursuing by new methods the aim which Germans here have always said would be pursued—that of lulling Turkey into a sense of security while completing preparations for her encirclement later on.

Meantime Turkey continues her defense preparations unhurriedly but very surely.

Cheering to Turks was the denial by Tass, the Soviet news agency, of German assertions that Hungary had yielded to the Axis demands with the approval of the Soviet Union. This is interpreted here as being also a denial by implication that Germany succeeded during the Berlin visit in winning Soviet Premier Molotoff's approval to the tripartite pact.

"Indeed, how could Russia have been expected to approve such a pact, which so undoubtedly was directed against her?" writes the newspaper Yeni Sabah.

Yugoslavs Reassured

The Tass denial is further seen as an indirect assurance of Soviet goodwill toward Yugoslavia, which was threatened by Hungary's adherence to the pact, and also of Soviet disapproval of the Germans' encouragement of the "revenge for Bessarabia" idea in Rumania, when that country also adhered.

Then came Bulgaria's denial—first that a note had been sent to Greece, then that the premier and the foreign minister were going to Berlin. Although this latter is regarded as particularly satisfactory, the press does not hesitate to remind Bulgaria that Turkey continues her defense measures, in view of the possibilities of Bulgaria finally yielding to Axis pressure, which would be treated as a threat to Turkey's security.

Hungary Warns Nations to Join New Order

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 27.—Hungarian Foreign Minister Count Csaky indirectly warned the leaders of certain states tonight that they would "regret bitterly if they fail to line up with the new order in Europe."

Explaining Hungary's recent diplomatic moves, Csaky also told the parliamentary foreign affairs committee in a speech that Hungary, by signing the Axis military pact, had assumed some risk but he figured that without risk there is no advancement.

"In my opinion we now have reached the stage where we have paid the last premium on the peace insurance policy," he said.

Csaky cautioned "certain states" against "rejoicing" too soon because of Greek victories.

"Some of them are rejoicing in vain because Italy has not yet occupied Greece. Time is no factor for the Axis powers. Fascist Italy is strong enough to give certain states time to think it over. . . . Let those suffer who do not want to take advantage of this respite," the foreign minister declared.

Yugoslav Leaders Worried

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Nov. 27.—Premier Cvetkovitc hurriedly summoned government leaders into emergency conferences today as Rumanian political executions, Bulgarian revisionist demands and Yugoslav political demonstrations heightened the tension in the Balkans.

Anxiety was growing hourly and reached its peak tonight as sensational rumors of new arrests and executions at Bucharest inspired fears in foreign and diplomatic circles here that more German troops may be rushed into Rumania to preserve order.

Additional uneasiness followed the Bulgarian parliament meeting, where the dangerous issue of Bulgarian claims to Yugoslav Macedonia was aggravated by a speech of former Premier Stankoff.

Rioting broke out today at the University of Zagreb following the explosion of two home-made time bombs in a bar and a theater last night. Mladan Smoljan, the son of the cabinet minister, was wounded today in the fighting between the students of the Croat-Peasant Party and Fascist students in the corridors of the university.

The Zagreb police blamed Axis sympathizers for last night's bombing and today's rioting. Police closed the university this afternoon.

Students Demand War on Greece

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 27 (AP).—Hundreds of demonstrating university students called tonight for an immediate fight against Greece and Yugoslavia for recovery of Macedonia.

Squads of mounted police kept watch as the demands were spread by speeches and pamphlets but there was no serious trouble.

Roosevelt Cautions Dies on Activities

has been demanded by Chairman Dies.

Only recently has Earl Browder, head of the Communist party in this country, announced the official severance of connections with the comintern. This was confessedly done to combat the necessity of Communists registering under the Voorhis act as agents of a foreign government.

The telegram of President Roosevelt to Representative Dies was in reply to one which Dies had sent the President, appealing to him to coordinate the activities of the various departments investigating Fifth Column activities, chiefly the Department of Justice, under which the Federal Bureau of Investigation operates, and the Department of State, along with the Dies Committee. It appealed for the "closest harmony" and asked for a meeting to be arranged.

President Roosevelt's reply was as follows:

"You are correct in saying that there should be the closest harmony between your committee of the House and all administrative departments in the investigation of Fifth Column activities in this country.

"There can be no constitutional objection to the investigation of such activities and a report thereon and recommendations thereon by a committee of the House of Representatives.

"It is, however, clear that the Constitution of the United States lodges the executive responsibility in the hands of the President and that, therefore, continuing administrative duties in relation to illegal activities lie in the executive branch of the Government and not in the legislative branch.

"As soon as this distinction is clearly recognized, there is no reason why there should not be complete hermony between your committee and the executive branch of the Government.

"I know that you will also see the point when I suggest that in the regular conduct of administrative work of this nature, carefully laid plans for the obtaining of further information, which may lead to the breaking up of subversive activities, may be severely handicapped or completely destroyed by premature disclosure of facts or of suppositions to the public, or by hasty seizure of evidence which might with a little more patience be obtained in a manner to be admissible in court, or by the giving of immunities to witnesses before Congressional committees as to matters revealed by their own testimony. Such action may defeat the ends of justice.

"If you agree, as I am sure you do, that this is a proper division of functions, any difficulties as to detail in applying these general principles can be worked out in conference between the executive department or departments affected and your committee.

"The Attorney General will be glad to arrange for the holding of such a conference at your convenience."

The telegram is construed as a tacit defense, at least, of the conduct of investigations by the Department of Justice which Representative Dies had criticized in a recent statement as outmoded in dealing with Fifth Column activities.

Additionally, the Dies committee had published a "white paper" giving the names of various Nazi agencies and agents furthering the interests of Germany in this country. The criticism implied in the President's telegram was thought not only to relate to this "premature disclosure" but also to other disclosures which are "in the works" of the Dies Committee.

As the plan now stands, the Texas Representative will see the President alone tomorrow, after which the President will be closeted with representatives of the Departments of State and Justice. Then, on Monday, Dies will meet again with the President, either alone or with the others present, to work out a plan of investigating espionage and sabotage activities.

This is the first time for a long period when Chairman Dies has been welcomed at the White House. Hostility existed between the President and the Dies Committee ever since 1938 when testimony before the committee concerning alleged complaisance of Michigan officials in regard to sitdown strikes at Flint and other cities, was credited with beating Frank Murphy for reelection as Governor of Michigan. The President lashed out at the committee at that time and on subsequent occasions has had cutting things to say about it.

Mrs. Roosevelt has also appeared at Dies Committee hearings and lent comfort by her presence to people being investigated by the committee, notably members of the American Youth Congress and the American Student's Union. Twice, following such committee sessions, she has taken members of these organizations to tea at the White House.

Representative Dies and Attorney General Robert H. Jackson have also had a tilt in the last few days. The day after Jackson came out with a statement that the Vultee aircraft strike at Downey, Calif., was Communist led, Dies issued a statement about the "deplorable weakness in our Government's dealing with Fifth Columnists," mentioning the Department of Justice, specifically. The Attorney General issued a statement in which he expressed regret at the Dies statement and said that the Dies Committee had uncovered nothing which had not already been uncovered by the FBI.

There is nothing essentially new in the "Red Book" issued by the Dies Committee yesterday. It is a compilation of extracts from Communist books, pamphlets, manifestos, transactions and writings of all kinds, beginning with the Communist manifesto of Karl Marx. It also contains several scores of pages of testimony already taken and published by the committee.

However, there is a new appositeness to those parts of it which show the Communist line of sabotaging national defense production and of working within the armed forces of the country.

In New York yesterday the Chemical Marketing Co. and its president, Dr. F. A. Kertess, vigorously denied the "accusations, implications and insinuations" of the Dies Committee's recent report on Nazi activities in which they were inferentially charged with allegiance to Germany.

Italians' Effort To Stand Fails

Pogradetz and the strategic highway from the latter city northwest to Elbasan in central Albania.

Italians, in two heavy counter attacks by air, bombed Greek positions at Muskopole, about 35 miles northwest of the captured Albanian town of Koritza, and Florina, important Greek base about 100 miles east of Koritza.

Heavy explosive and incendiary bombs were reported to have caused fires at Florina, which is surrounded by airports.

The Greeks were said to have shot down two Italian planes during the attack.

An unconfirmed report here said 1,000 soldiers, mostly Albanians, of the Italian army crossed the Yugoslavia border north of Lake Ochrida during the last two days.

More Italians Landed

Athens, Nov. 27 (INS).—Two new Italian divisions have been landed in Albania, bringing the two-day total of reinforcements to more than 60,000, it was reported tonight, as a tremendous battle raged on the southwest front, where the Italians were reported evacuating Porto Edda, with the fate of strategic Argirocastro still in doubt.

Greek troops were said to have reached the Adriatic seacoast west of Konispolis, attempting to march up to Porto Edda, but so far they have been held up by the Italians.

Reported Fleeing Port

Belgrade, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—A decisive battle was being fought for Argrocastro, most important Italian base in southwestern Albania, as Greek forces smashed to within 3 miles of Argrocastro, frontier reports said.

Gen. Ubaldo Sodu, fighting desperately to stem the Italian retreat in the south, was said to have ordered his legions to "defend Argrocastro to the last man," but dispatches from Struga reported the Fascist soldiers already were evacuating the town and concentrating on new positions in the Ljuari River valley.

Fearful of being cut off from the main body of the Italian army in the south, troops were said to have started withdrawing from Porto Edda northward along the coastal road last night. Porto Edda is 15 miles southwest of Argrocastro. Large Fascist contingents were said to have arrived this morning at Porto Palermo from Porto Edda.

Badoglio Reported on Scene

Athens, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Marshal Pietro Badoglio, chief of staff of the Italian army, tonight was reported to have established headquarters at the Albanian capital of Tirana to organize Fascist troops for a counteroffensive.

Rome, Nov. 27.—One hundred and fifty German police officers are coming to Italy for instruction in colonial service, according to a communique issued this morning. It was stated that the Germans are being trained to go to the colonies "which will be returned to the Reich after its victory."

A. F. L. Demands 'Curb' on Arnold

Antitrust Suits Called a 'Vicious Attack' on Labor

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Nov. 27—The American Federation of Labor late today demanded a "curb" on Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, charging his antitrust division of the Department of Justice with "unwarranted and destructive activities against organized labor."

The federation's annual convention unanimously approved a report asserting that the antitrust division had shown "malice" toward the A. F. of L. "alone" in its prosecutions of labor organizations.

The report said:

"We must demand from those occupying higher positions than the person in charge of the antitrust division that they curb these unwarranted and destructive activities against organized labor."

States Three Principles

Labor's right to collective bargaining under the defense program was reaffirmed by the A. F. of L. which stated three principles it wished obesrved under war conditions:

"1. Universal obligation to service for defense—industrial or military—under . . . democratic conditions.

"2. Labor should have representation on all policy making and administrative agencies and boards

"3. Labor standards and other provisions for social welfare must be maintained under emergency conditions as essential to efficient production as well as national morale."

At the same time the delegates, coolly noting that a standing committee was ready to confer with the Congress of Industrial Organizations on labor peace, decided to continue "assistance" to unorganized workers.

Grateful to L. L. G. W.

The adopted resolutions committee report stated:

"Regardless of the trend taken by peace negotiations, it is mandatory that the A. F. of L. make use of all its agencies so that trade unionism may be brought to the assistance of those at present unorganized."

But President William Green, in a brief address of gratitude for the return to the A. F. of L. of the International Ladies' Garment Workers union last June declared:

"We express the hope that others who have left us will now be sufficiently disillusioned and courageous to do as the L. L. G. W. U. did and turn their face to us, open the door and come back home to the A. F. L. during the next year."

The report, however, did not indicate in a single phrase that the A. F. L. intended any further step toward settling the differences which have kept it at arm's length from the C. I. O. since 1935.

In its attack on Arnold and the antitrust division, the A. F. L. report declared:

"Little over a year ago organized labor was startled by a criminal prosecution instituted by the antitrust division of the Department of Justice against an A. F. L. affiliate for having engaged in usual and ordinary union activities in furtherance of labor's interests.

"Before labor had an opportunity to appraise fully its significance, a number of prosecutions were instituted by the same division of the Department of Justice against labor unions and their officials.

Denounce "Vicious Attack"

"In the past two years more prosecutions have been brought against organized labor for alleged violations of the antitrust laws than had been brought in the preceding 50 years.

"Thus after years of effort and at a time when labor has succeeded in protecting its basic rights it is confronted with the most vicious attack ever made upon it.

"No power or force, intent upon destroying labor's rights, could have devised a more destructive weapon with which to accomplish its end than the revival of antitrust law prosecutions against labor unions.

"These are not isolated prosecutions of alleged isolated violations of the law. The prosecutions are a course of action planned to fit in with the personal views of the head of the antitrust division of the Department of Justice as to what constitutes proper labor union activities in relation to interstate commerce."

The A. F. L. charged that with "dramatics that approximate the art of showmanship," a number of prosecutions were started at the same time "on fantastic economic theories never heard of before."

Millis Takes Oath as Chief Of Labor Board

Harry Alvin Millis, Chicago expert in labor and social economics, took the oath of office yesterday as chairman of the National Labor Relations Board.

Board Members William M. Leiserson and Edwin S. Smith, whose conflict of opinions has deadlocked the board in some decisions since Chairman J. Warren Madden's term expired in August, watched the ceremony.

At about the same time, the nomination of Madden to be a judge of the Federal Court of Claims was unanimously approved yesterday by a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Senator Miller (Democrat), of Arkansas, subcommittee chairman, said the full committee will be polled by telegram and that Madden's name should go before the Senate tomorrow.

President Roosevelt appointed Madden to the bench on the same day he named Millis to take Madden's place on the N. R. L. B. Madden's conduct of his office on the labor board had been severely criticized by the Smith committee and other groups.

No witnesses appeared to protest Madden's appointment, Senator Miller reported.

The Senate gave Millis' appointment unanimous confirmation and the belief has been expressed in a number of quarters that his selection would still some of the recent criticism directed at the board.

Long-postponed changes in procedure and personnel were expected to follow the seating of Millis, and these may eliminate some of the reasons for objections that have been urged against the board in Congress.

There are a number of important labor cases awaiting disposition by the full board including the controversial West Coast longshoremen's in which the board gave the C. I. O. exclusive coastwise bargaining powers two years ago. The A. F. L. Longshoremen's Union now is demanding a rehearing.

Funds to Equip Bases Allotted By Roosevelt

$50,000,000 Granted From Special Account For Immediate Start

Quick plugging of loopholes in America's Atlantic frontier was assured yesterday when Secretary of the Navy Knox disclosed that $50,000,000 of President Roosevelt's "special" defense fund has been allotted to provide oil storage facilities and ship and plane anchorages on the eight sites acquired from Great Britain in the destroyer-bases deal.

Small sums spent at each of the base sites will fit them as operating bases for destroyers and defending planes, officers explained. Allotment of $50,000,000 from the $200,000,000 that Congress gave the President to spend at his discretion, means that work can be started immediately, without waiting for a Congressional authorization and appropriation.

Knox disclosed also that a location for the base on Trinidad, strategic island off South America's northern coast, has already been approved by local authorities. Now only formal approval from London is lacking.

Previously locations had been formally approved for the seven other sites in the defense chain: Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, Antigua, St. Lucia, British Guiana and Newfoundland.

A separate naval command would probably be created for the bases acquired on 99-year leases from Britain, Knox said. He intimated that Admiral John W. Greenslade, head of a naval board that selected the sites, would command the new naval district.

A whirlwind day of national defense activity brought these other developments:

Knox disclosed that 31,908 naval and Marine reserves had been told they might be called to active duty at any moment. He also said that reserves from New York and New Jersey had been called to service with destroyers operating in the Panama Canal area. Similar "standby" orders had already been issued to the fleet and the organized reserves. The Merchant Marine reserves are the only class that has not been warned to be ready for service.

The Navy's new $3,500,000 air base at Tongue Point, Oreg., will be ready to go into operation December 15, Knox announced. He also said a new naval command, the Eighth Naval District with headquarters at New Orleans, La., now under jurisdiction of the Fifth District at Charleston, S. C., would soon be created.

The Defense Commission sent to 500 firms working on defense orders a list of idle plants located in "ghost towns." The list, compiled under direction of Sidney Hillman, commissioner for labor, showed idle foundries, a rolling mill, machine shops, tool manufacturing plants and other facilities scattered through Pennsylvania, Kentucky, the central Midwest, the Tennessee and Shenandoah Valleys and the Great Lakes region. Hillman said he hoped the list would be used to put people back to work in the "ghost towns."

The Army called on local commanders to supply recommendations for promotion of more than 1,200 reserve first and second lieutenants now on active duty. About 1,130 reserve second lieutenants who had completed at least one year of extended active duty with the Regular Army would be eligible for temporary rank as first lieutenant. Approximately 100 reserve first lieutenants, all in the Air Corps, with at least three years' active duty, could qualify for temporary captaincies.

Secretary Knox said he plans to leave Washington next Tuesday to join the Atlantic patrol force for maneuvers off Calebra in the Canal area. Marine units will take part in landing exercises during the operations.

The Navy Secretary also said he agreed fully with a statement by Secretary of War Stimson yesterday that airlines should forego expansion so that British and American defense orders can be more speedily filled by aircraft companies.

Asked whether the country has adequate steel plant capacity, Knox said that was a moot question. He recalled that the Defense Commission has called the capacity adequate up to the present but added that there are some who question this. Steel plants, he said, are now operating at 96 per cent of capacity.

Aubrey Williams, National Youth Administrator, said after a call at the White House that the NYA now has 300,000 youths between 18 and 25 employed at "work experience" tasks connected with national defense. Some of them, he said, are

Walter-Logan Bill Approved By House Unit

Unanimous Consent To Revised Version May Be Asked Today

The House Judiciary Committee shoved the Walter-Logan bill another step along the road to the White House yesterday when it unanimously approved all Senate changes in the measure.

It was predicted last night that at today's session the House will be asked to give its unanimous consent to the revised version of the bill. If this move, which is understood to have approval of the Democratic leadership, is thwarted, friends of the measure said it would come up again next Monday—and that a quorum of the House then would be called.

"There will be no adjournment of this House until there's a vote on this bill—if unanimous consent is not given," one influential Representative said last night. Demand for a quorum of the House would require many members who are now at home to flock back to Washington.

Throughout its long history, the measure has been fought by Administration forces; but their strategy now appears to be to let it go to the White House, where it is almost certain to be vetoed. Passage over veto at this session of oCngress seems to be out of the question.

Martin Popper, secretary of the National Lawyers' Guild, indicated yesterday that his organization would ask the President to disapprove the bill. It will "hamper the orderly administration of the law and vitiate by indirection much of the social legislation enacted in recent years," he said.

The measure is designed to restrict the powers of independent Federal agencies, particularly the NLRB and the SEC. It provides for judicial review of administrative rulings, and attempts to establish greater uniformity in procedure.

Jones 'Abdicates' in Favor Of Undersecretary Taylor

He's the One to Do Commerce Job, Secretary Says

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones yesterday, in effect "abdicated" his job as Secretary of Commerce, then announced that the Government is discussing plans for a new loan to China. The question of credits to Britain, however, Jones said would be up to Congress.

The "abdication" came at a press conference a few minutes after Wayne Chatfield Taylor had been sworn in as Undersecretary of Commerce.

Asked whether he had any special jobs in mind for Taylor, Jones said that the Undersecretary would be the Secretary of Commerce, and the man "who will have to do the work."

Oath Administered

Jones explained, jokingly, that he intended to go to parties and be a front man, although he added that he might keep an eye on the department for awhile until he saw how his new aide took hold. In practice, Jones as head of the Commerce Department, and the Federal Loan Agency, has more jobs than any other Government administrator except the President.

Taylor took the oath of office from Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed. At the ceremony were Mrs. Taylor, chiefs of the department and other friends.

Jones told his press conference that he had been talking with Chinese representatives "very indefinitely" about additional loans for their country. He said he had only read in the papers a report that the next loan would be for $100,000,000.

"As long as China is in trouble," Jones said, "we hope to help her when and as we can."

"I think we'd just like to be helpful, to continue to show our friendship and willingness to help China, and we expect to do that."

Payments Kept Up

He pointed out that during the past two years the American Government had loaned $70,000,000 to China for purchase of raw materials, and that they were up with their payments on these loans. Asked whether a $15,000,000 loan was also being considered for Indo-China, Jones said that he knew nothing about it, but added that negotiations were continuing with a number of Latin American countries, including Argentine, Chile, and Cuba.

While volunteering the information about the Chinese discussions, Jones parried questions about credits for Britain, saying that he had not discussed the problem with the British, and that it would be a matter for Congress to decide.

He declined to say whether he believed repeal of the Johnson Act would be necessary before American credit could be extended to the British. He cited an earlier statement he made to Congress "that we had made no loans and had no notion of making any in contravention of the Johnson Act."

The Johnson Act bars loans to Governments which have defaulted on the World War debt and Great Britain is one of these.

School Resumes Regular Hours

First Assistant Superintendent of Schools Robert Haycock announced yesterday that classes at the Webb School, damaged by a two-alarm fire Tuesday morning, will be resumed at 9 a. m. today.

Damage to upper-floor classrooms has been repaired, Dr. Haycock said, by a staff of workers from the District Repair Shop. Renovation of the school attic will continue without disrupting classes, he added. The part-time schedule at Blow School, where the Webb youngsters were sent following the fire, will be discontinued, Dr. Haycock said, and regular hours at both buildings will be resumed this morning.

Convention Scheduled At Community Center

Washington Jewish communal leaders Saturday night and Sunday will be hosts to the annual convention of the Pennsylvania-Middle Atlantic Federation of Y. M. and Y. W. H. A. at the Jewish Community Center.

Benjamin Ourisman, president of the center, is chairman of the convention committee. Representatives of various local organizations are joining in making arrangements for entertainment of the delegates. On Sunday afternoon the service council of the center will hold an informal reception for visitors in the Cafritz Auditorium.

Stronger Economy Held Nation's Need

Columbia Professor Sees Collapse Peril After Emergency

The Nation now lacks an economic organization capable of supplying demands for arms while at the same time raising living standards and providing insurance against collapse when the war emergency has passed, Dr. Walter Rautenstrauch, noted economist and author, declared here yesterday.

Opening a series of lectures on "Defense of America" for the Department of Agriculture Graduate School, Dr. Rautenstrauch, professor of industrial engineering at Columbia University, declared:

"The processes used in building our national defenses must be geared to a long-term policy for operating the national plant which will assure a reasonable probability of minimum disturbance when the production of war goods and the drafting of young men for military service can no longer be relied upon to absorb our idle manpower."

Sees Danger of Collapse

The national economy, he said, must be one "capable of sustained operations under the impact of the most powerful economic and social forces the world has ever experienced."

Dr. Rautenstrauch contended that the "organization structure" of the national economic plant "which is required if our objectives are to be attained is at variance with that which is now provided." He held, also, that the "national economy is in grave danger of collapse after the period of compulsory military service and the present high rate of production of military goods is ended."

Dr. Rautenstrauch declared that all operation divisions of the "national plant"—manufacturing, mining, agriculture, etc.—"are interdependent in function, growth and vitality." He added: "There is no such thing as private enterprise."

Offers Suggestion

Dr. Rautenstrauch suggested, by means of questions which he did not attempt to answer, means which might be considered for reorganization of the "economic plant."

He asked if the capital structure of corporate enterprise should be redesigned so that "all earnings above those required to satisfy the stockholders" could be "apportioned to reserves and to disbursement to capital and labor in the proportion of face value of shares to annual labor pay roll?"

He also asked consideration of a system of employment of all unemployed by industries where there is unused capacity and where there is also "social need for the products." He asked if this system should not include Government loans to finance wages and materials costs, the loans to be repaid by the industry benefited either directly or through delivery to the Government of products in an amount determined by the proportion of sums advanced to the total cost of manufacture.

Youth's Fear He's Been Shot Lands Him Behind Bars

Norman Dailey, a night watchman in an automobile showroom at 1526 Fourteenth Street Northwest, fired five shots at an intruder and missed early yesterday, but the prowler thought otherwise, landing himself behind bars.

The suspect, an 18-year-old colored boy, was fired upon when he was discovered in the Trew Motor Co. by Dailey while the latter was making his rounds. Diving headlong through a plate glass window, the youth escaped the bullets and Dailey.

But a short time later a colored youth applied at Freedmen's Hospital for treatment for a "gunshot wound" in his foot. To his chagrin, doctors told him that a sliver of glass had punctured his skin and before he could leave the hospital police arrived.

Dailey identified the youth and said he was the same person he had fired at—and missed—at another automobile showroom last year.

Discussion of Aid To Britain Put Off Till Next Session

late Key Pittman, of Nevada, told reporters after yesterday's meeting that he regards aid to Britain as "the established policy" of the United States Government.

Extent of such aid, George said, is a "technical and professional" question to be determined by President Roosevelt on the advice of the War and Navy Departments.

"My position always has been and still is strongly against involvement in the European war," George added. "I think whether we succeed in remaining outside the war depends on how rapidly we can prepare an impregnable defense on all fronts."

The chairman said that when the issue of credit for Britain comes up in January the committee must thoroughly investigate British purchasing power in the United States and inquire "how any particular form of aid may serve Britain."

"I am willing to go the distance that the executive, with the advice of the Army, Navy and Air Corps, recommends," he said.

The motion to postpone consideration of the King and Nye resolutions was made by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri. George reported, and unanimously adopted after Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, suggested an understanding that the resolutions should be taken up by the committee immediately after the new Congress convenes January 3.

Nye said yesterday he will press for action on his resolution early in the next session. British holdings in this country have been estimated at $5,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000," he commented, "but I don't think that half measures it."

One of the King resolutions would authorize the President to enter negotiations with Britain for immediate leasing or purchasing of Pacific bases from Britain. "In partial consideration" for acquisition of these bases, the President would be empowered to extend to Britain such credits "as he may deem advisable." Provisions of the Johnson and Neutrality Acts which now prohibit loans to Britain would be nullified.

King said yesterday he considered the passage of such legislation an urgent necessity. "Great Britain is fighting the battle of all democratic peoples," he declared. "If Britain is destroyed, the United States obviously would be the next target of assault by the totalitarian states."

America also should give all aid short of war to China and Greece, the veteran legislator said. "Greece is now defending herself with great courage against the cowardly and unprovoked attack of Mussolini," he asserted, while China "fights our battle, too, in resisting the Japanese aggression which is part of the same great Axis conspiracy against democracy."

A second resolution sponsored by King would amend the Johnson and Neutrality Acts to permit Britain to buy American agricultural products on credit. King said he saw no reason why such a proposal could not be given immediate Congressional approval.

Senator George stated that the Foreign Relations Committee will not meet again this session, "unless an occasion should arise for which the entire Congress would be called back."

The committee yesterday gave unanimous approval to President Roosevelt's nomination of Admiral William D. Leahy as Ambassador to France. His name is expected to go before the Senate tomorrow.

Special Jury Sought In Criminal Assault

Waynesboro, Va., Nov. 27 (AP).—Augusta County Commonwealth's Attorney John White said he would ask Circuit Judge Florius Crosby today to call a special grand jury to consider the case of Joseph Mickens, colored youth charged with criminal assault of a married woman here.

Mickens, whose mother said he was 15 but whom officers believe to be older, was carried to the Roanoke jail for safe keeping, I. G. Vass, Waynesboro city manager, said.

service in the Nation's new citizen-armies, were ordered to remain behind while laboratory tests are being completed. A fifth is in line for mobilization with the District National Guard and was excused.

Aptitude Tests Today

At Union Station last night, the trainees said good-by to relatives and friends. Then at a "fall-in" command, their first in Army life, they marched smilingly to their train.

Mothers, wives and sweethearts hurried along with the men for a final embrace on the loading platform. The train pulled out with the soldiers waving from the windows.

Detraining at 9:05 at Laurel, Md., the selectees were driven in buses the 5 miles to the Fort Meade reception center. Immediately on arrival they were marched in a "checking" center. Here they answered a roll call, were given brief physical rechecks, then escorted to their barracks. A few, who so desired, were taken to a company mess hall for coffee and doughnuts. They had dined earlier at Continental Hotel here, consuming their last civilian meal.

Today the trainees will be hurried through a "processing" administered to all recruits. They will be given hour-long aptitude tests and personal interviews to determine for which branch of the service they are best fitted. They will then be assigned uniforms and hear talks by officers, designed to help acclimate them to Army life.

The lengthy induction process began at 7:30 a. m. as the 32 selectees filed into the Army Induction Center, 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest, and saw their names chalked up on a slate. They were given numbers corresponding to the order in which they were to be put through the minute examinations.

First, the men were taken to the Army Medical Center for lung x-rays, then returned to the induction center to be put through the tests by seven specialists.

Midway in the morning the men marched to the National Guard Armory where they were given a send-off in ceremonies marked by speeches of National Selective Service Director Clarence A. Dykstra, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Capital draft head, Commissioner J. Russell Young, and representatives of several civic groups.

At Fort George G. Meade, Md., meanwhile, Lieut Col. Edwin J. Rehmann, commanding officer of the reception center, declared the camp machinery geared to absorb the new men into the post's expanding personnel.

Selectees Get Barracks

In a tour of the encampment officers pointed to permanent brick barracks where the Washingtonians were housed. In another part of the 7,470-acre camp were rows of tents for Regular soldiers who had been ordered out of the more commodious barracks to make way for the selectees.

The Washingtonians already had been assigned to a temporary receiving unit, Company D, Col. Rehmann said, however, some District men may not remain at Meade more than 24 hours.

Tomorrow 46 selectives are to go as replacements to the First Battalion of the Ninety-ninth Field Artillery at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., while 149 are to be sent simultaneously to a medical detachment at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. It is thought some of these replacements will be drawn from trainees coming from the Capital and nearby Maryland and Virginia counties.

Trainees not going to these posts will be cleared from Meade for other replacement centers in four days, it is expected. Whether they will go to Infantry, Artillery, Engineering or other posts will depend on aptitude tests the Washingtonians will take at Meade today.

Induction for 19 Today

Nineteen more District men will be put through the induction mill today, along with 21 men from nearby Maryland counties and 16 from adjacent Virginia communities.

Also to face induction soon are other Washington registrants, to be classified by local boards as replacements for the man excused yesterday and any of the four who may be found physically unfit after completion of their examinations today.

The 27 inducted yesterday were:

Stuart S. Whipple, 2929 Connecticut Avenue Northwest; Joseph Goldsmith, 4800 Georgia Avenue Northwest; Chester J. Handler, 618 Rittenhouse Street Northwest; Harry P. Rosen, 4902 Seventh Street Northwest; James P. Marchona, 924 Kennedy Street Northwest; H. R. Bell, 818 Rock Creek Church Road; Warren Feldman, 1601 Hobart Street Northwest; Charles W. 'Bristol' Pounded In 4th Mass Raid

London Has Easy Night; 11 German Planes Shot Down

By the Associated Press

London, (Thursday) Nov. 28.—Massed German warplanes gave a southwest England town last night and early today its 207th raid since the Battle of Britain began, causing a few casualties and damaging houses.

Other raiders, however, gave London a comparatively easy night, keeping the city under wraps until around 2 a. m. (8 p. m. E. S. T.), when the "raiders passed" signal was sounded.

Many incendiary bombs were dropped in the southwest attack but a heavy antiaircraft barrage dulled the edge of the raid and drove many Germans out to sea before they could unload their bombs.

Later some heavy bombs did succeed in causing damage and casualties.

[The town may be Bristol, main port of entry for supplies from the United States. If so, it was Bristol's fourth successive night of aerial pounding.]

The ministry of home security also reported that "a few bombs were dropped at one place in southwestern England during the afternoon. House property was damaged and a few people sustained injuries."

From time to time in the raid on London, there was considerable noise "upstairs" and bombs were dropped in one district.

The Nazis, however, seemed to come over singly and merely skirted the capital area.

British pilots had fought invading aerial squadrons all day long on their old defense line above the Kentish coast and were declared to have shot down 11 German planes.

This series of engagements, in which the loss of only two British craft was acknowledged, turned aside the main force of the Nazi's attack and London had but three brief daylight alarms.

No British Pilots Lost

London, Nov. 27 (INS).—Britain's Royal Air Force fighter pilots, while knocking down 35 German planes in six days, have not lost a single man, it was declared tonight. Two fighter planes were lost, but their pilots reached safety.

British Peril Acute, Commons Is Told and inadequate production of war materials, in voicing dissatisfaction with the present state of affairs.

Not even Labor Minister Ernest Bevin's more optimistic picture of the way manpower is being used satisfied these critics.

Hore-Belisha said that instead of depending on anticipated help from the United States toward replacing ships sunk or destroyed by Nazi U-boats and airplanes, it would be better to concentrate on knocking Italy out of the war as quickly as possible. That, he said, was the surest way of relieving a large part of the fleet now tied up in the Mediterranean and enabling it to be used for greater protection of shipping.

"That is our great opportunity," he said. "If we cannot build ships we can at least save those we have."

U. S. Lacks Facilities

"The United States is not a mercantile shipbuilding nation. It has many preoccupations with its own naval difficulties in the Atlantic and Pacific.

"As might have been expected, they will feel an urgent need to divert their ordinary shipbuilding capacity to naval shipbuilding. The year before the war they only produced 300,000 tons of mercantile tonnage."

Realistic though it was, Greenwood's speech was not gloomy by any means. Since the war broke out, he said, output of war equipment in some cases had quadrupled. Then he added, with complete candor:

"It is not enough, but it is undeniable that substantial progress has been made."

Limitations in production of nonessentials, he said, together with other steps in contemplation should release thousands engaged in their manufacture for work more important to the prosecution of the war. Faced with an emergency after the collapse of France, Greenwood said, it was necessary to adopt "unscientific" methods because of the urgency of the situation. Now, he said, conditions had improved. Continuing, he said:

"We have had to face air attacks and attacks on our shipping, but if the German boast of the weight of the bombs dropped over this country be even nearly accurate, the results on production have been surprisingly small. . . . Yet every interference with production must be made good either from abroad or by production at home.

"For some time past time lost through air raids has been substantially decreasing, but we still have problems due to damage or destruction of premises of plants. Let's admit recent enemy air attacks have retarded our expanding program but beyond that I do not go. With close knowledge of the industrial damage we have suffered I say unhesitatingly that it has not eaten to any serious extent into our industrial capacity."

"It has embarrassed us and will continue to embarrass us and we shall have more difficulties of this kind to face, but at least it is good to know that the structure stands virtually intact though temporarily dislocated."

Next Greenwood discussed the shipping situation, saying:

"It is true we have suffered very heavily. It is true that this is much like April, 1917, but though far worse than it should be, the situation is not as bad as it might have been . . ."

Greenwood added, however, that the situation could not be regarded with equanimity. What could be done would be done to increase home production, he said. Meanwhile, he said, he was hoping for accretions of tonnage from the United States, from which some ships were purchased and where orders were placed.

Britain's increasing production and growing help from North America, Greenwood said, were more than a match for the industrial resources and capacity of the enemy.

This tempered optimism, however, failed to still the fears or the tongue of Hore-Belisha, who estimated Britain was losing merchant tonnage at a rate of more than 4,500,000 tons yearly.

Declaring that shipping "windfalls" Britain had received from the Norwegians, Danes, Dutch, Belgians and Greeks amounted to 8,000,000 tons, the former war minister said all these gains would be dissipated at that rate within two years. Hore-Belisha said:

"Today Mr. Greenwood informed us our own tonnage was below what it was at the beginning of the war and that we have not lived up to our program of new construction. That program was to produce 1,350,000 tons yearly. At the present rate of sinkings that would not see us through 15 weeks of this war.

"What is the real remedy? It is to knock Italy out of the war. The Greeks have opened the way by a swift series of successes. They have disclosed the weaknesses of Italian morale. Now, surely, is a propitious time to sustain and supplement these successes."

Purvis Is Hopeful

London, Nov. 27 (AP).—A heavy increase in United States aid to Britain in 1941 was indicated today by Arthur B. Purvis, chairman of the British purchasing commission in the United States.

Purvis, who has just returned to England, told a press conference:

"Next year, if I were sitting in Germany, I would be very worried at what is going to flow out of the United States."

Uruguayan Bases Deal Advances

the bases, and went on record as opposing forever the cession of any territory or the construction of bases in any way that would diminish Uruguayan sovereignty. President Baldomir immediately announced that the conversations for the construction of the bases would nevertheless continue.

Although the chamber recently voted down a motion to question Roletti and Foreign Minister Alberto Guani regarding bases, both ministers appeared at this afternoon's session at the request of President Baldomir, in an effort to clear up the confusion which has surrounded the conversations.

Roletti told the Chamber no agreement had been signed with the United States or any other country, that the conversations are still in an informal stage between technical experts of the United States and Uruguay, and that if an agreement is reached the Congress will be consulted before it is signed.

The Minister said that in response to the United States' inquiry if Uruguay was willing to put its ports and anchorages at the disposition of any armed forces which might be sent to the defense of this part of the continent, Uruguay replied that the only port which is at present adequate for such use is Montevideo. Uruguay also inquired of the American agents in what practical form the United States could extend efficient help to Uruguay if the continent were attacked. Roletti did not reveal the American answer to that question.

Foreign Minister Guani spoke only five minutes before the chamber. He declared the government's conversations with other American countries regarding plans for joint defense of the continent are in keeping with the international situation now existing, and in accordance with agreements signed at recent Pan-American conferences.

Roletti said Uruguay has also agreed to put its very fine system of concrete roads at the disposition of any armed forces which may be sent to Uruguay to participate in continental defense. He made it clear, however, that any such help is to be sent only at Uruguay's request, and that Uruguay's offer of bases, roads and other facilities covers only those cases where Uruguay asks for assistance.

The defense minister in attacking newspaper publicity which has been given to this subject, said the Cape of Punta del Este had not even been mentioned in conversations with United States agents.

But President Baldomir, in an interview with a local newspaper, said the natural port of Maldonado offers an excellent site for another naval base, whenever arrangements may be made to equip it as such. The cape known as Punta Del Este forms one side of Maldonado Bay.

Indorsed, 53 to 21

The Chamber, by a vote of 53 to 21, indorsed the government's policy in the following terms:

"The Chamber of Deputies, after hearing a report from the President's representatives, expressed its complete and absolute support of the international policy followed by the government in dealing with questions considered this afternoon and which are in accord with the principles Uruguay has followed in all international conferences and with the policy of American cooperation and solidarity."

Shipping Losses Crippling Britain, Germans Assert

By C. Brooks Peters.

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Nov. 27.—Although air attacks on British industrial centers such as Coventry and Birmingham in the last fortnight have tended to divert attention from the German "counter-blockade" of the British Isles, raids on enemy merchant shipping, Germans declare, augur every bit as ill for Britain as the intermittent blows of Reich Marshal Hermann Goering's air force.

That the British merchant marine has been suffering substantial losses, particularly since June, when the Germans occupied all the coasts to the northeast, east and south of the British Isles, was admitted by Ronald H. Cross, British shipping minister, yesterday when he asserted, according to reports available here, that British losses had increased three-fold since June and now total an average of 60,000 tons a week.

German reports put British losses much higher. In the ten days between November 16 and 26, for example, according to a German high command communique, the Reich air arm sank 43,000 tons of enemy shipping, or shipping operating in the interests of the enemy, while submarines sank another 116,000 tons, for a total of 160,000 tons. And additional 40,000 tons were estimated to have been sunk by other means.

German speedboats, furthermore, are said to have sunk a total of 212,000 tons of enemy shipping since being employed in the west, some of which may have been accounted for in the past ten days, while a German war vessel operating abroad is reported to have sunk 95,000 tons, although the date is not specified.

These figures, however, the Germans argue, are not complete. For they point out as the German high command almost daily reported, that the mouths of British harbors have been and are being mined almost daily—it may be assumed from the air as well as by surface submarines. How much tonnage the enemy loses as a result of these mines and through long-range bombardments of convoys and harbors such as Dover by German coastal batteries cannot, it is said here, be estimated.

If the German estimate of 200,000 tons sunk in ten days is true, and if the average of 20,000 tons daily be maintained for a month, then the dangerous total of some 600,000 tons sunk would be reached. In the World War the highest total sunk by the Germans and later published by the British was 852,000 tons in April, 1917.

Then, however, the British still had contact with Scandinavian markets as well as those of Holland; France was an allied nation, and airplanes were not sufficiently developed to enable them to rain devastating loads of bombs on home industry, thus increasing the necessity for importation of vital war materials.

Of 852,000 tons of shipping sunk by the Germans in April, 1917, 522,000 tons belonged to the British, 145,000 tons to their allies and 185,000 tons to neutrals. Today, American freighters are not allowed to voyage to England, the Italians are now German allies, the Japanese are Axis partners and portions of the merchant marines of Belgium, Holland and the Scandinavian countries fell into German hands last spring.

U. S. Election Stand Angers Mexicans

Almazanists Lay Camacho Recognition To Business Motives

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Nov. 27.—Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan's renunciation of all claims to the Mexican presidency because of Washington's recognition of the election of his rival, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, brought an upsurge of angry criticism today with the United States as one of the targets.

From Almazan's office, where he talked with associates, came literature charging the United States had recognized his opponent in order to obtain Mexican markets for "Jewish merchants." The circulars called on the people and the army to unite to defend Mexican integrity.

Some of his followers felt that Almazan himself had "let them down" and expressed the belief he should fight for the power to which "the people elected him," while others regarded his defeat as inevitable because of the "unjust, imperialist attitude of the United States."

The pro-Almazan newspaper, La Prensa, said the general returned to Mexico to renounce the presidency "because the United States did not recognize him," and the government's paper, El Nacional, which had supported Avila Camacho, printed this on its front page:

"Zero plus zero equals zero. We print Almazan's declaration on page 5 merely as a historic curiosity."

The general's followers seemed agreed that their movement had collapsed. Fears of a possible revolution faded, but independent pro-United States sources were fearful that German and Italian partisans in Mexico might be emboldened by the anti-Semitic circulars.

One of them charged that the United States' price of recognition of Avila Camacho was surrender of naval, military and air bases and the conversion of Lower California to a Jewish refugee colony.

A liberal - conservative cabinet, described as "pro-United States," has been selected by President-elect Avila Camacho, Senate leaders said tonight.

They reported the cabinet would be headed by former Senator Ezequiel Padilla, strong advocate of collaboration with the United States, as minister of foreign affairs.

said Ernest G. Draper, chairman of the Government Unit, should make possible additional and increased giving.

Some Quotas Exceeded

"Out of about 45,000 Government employes who have not yet given," he told team chairmen and keymen, "experience indicates at least 25,000 are able and willing to give."

Large Government agencies which already have exceeded their quotas include the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the State, Treasury, War, Postoffice and Commerce Departments.

The Government Unit so far this year has reported 117,531 pledges for $734,392, and quotas have been filled by 271 divisions.

Metropolitan Unit solicitors still have at least 2,000 residents to see, Paul D. Sleeper, chairman, stated.

"If our volunteers will stay with their self-appointed tasks and make repeat calls on the not-at-homes, and others who have not yet been reached, I have full confidence that the Metropolitan Unit quota will be reached," he said. His unit has reported 10,353 pledges of $366,307 or 84.5 per cent of quota.

Maryland Efforts Redoubled

Maryland unit leaders also are redoubling their efforts to meet their quota during the extended period.

The Montgomery County unit has reported 2,135 givers of $20,850, or 92.5 per cent of quota, and Prince Georges County unit has lifted 1,445 givers of $7,216, or 48.12 per cent of quota.

Belford V. Lawson, chairman of the Capital unit, predicted "a big jump" in reports at the luncheon today.

Capital Unit division of area two, headed by Mrs. Edith deBruhl, and division one of area five, headed by Miss Helen Sparks, have obtained 100 per cent of their quotas.

Team captains who have reported 100 per cent or more of quota are Mrs. Leona Smith, the Rev. A. A. Burch, Mrs. Marie Buckner, Mrs. Veronica Cohen, Miss Linnie Smith, Mrs. Ruth Woodson, Mrs. Cecilia Ferguson, Miss Lily Mae Barr, Mrs. Emily Baer, Mrs. Sarah Gray, Mrs. Thelma Raymond, Mrs. Miriam Frye, Mrs. Mary Pope, Robert Hamilton, and Mrs. Hortense Johnson.

Senate Committee Approves Leahy As Envoy to Vichy

Admiral William D. Leahy's nomination as Ambassador to France was approved unanimously by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday and will be placed before the Senate for confirmation tomorrow.

At the same time, President Roosevelt named Jose M. Gallardo, Puerto Rico's commissioner of education, as acting Governor.

Dr. Gallardo, born in Puerto Rico, acquired most of his higher education and began his professional career in the United States. For ten years prior to his appointment in 1937 as commissioner of education for Puerto Rico, Dr. Gallardo was associate professor and professor of romance languages at the College of Charleston, S. Dr. Gallardo received his A. B. degree at Park College, Parkville, Mo.; his M. A. from Pennsylvania State College, and, in 1932, his Ph.D. as a result of summer study in the preceding three years at the University of North Carolina.

Arms Outlay Cuts Relief Roll Only Slightly

Only Skilled Men Taken Up; Further Reductions Forecast

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

Despite mounting defense outlays, WPA relief rolls rose yesterday for a new peak for the fiscal year amid official indications that relief funds will not stretch the full year.

WPA spokesmen, reporting a 1,805,944 relief load for the week ended November 20, said that to date only skilled enrollees, in the main, have been affected by defense program activity and relief demands from the unskilled continue high.

Rate of spending and the number on relief meantime continued well below the level of a year ago, reflecting an improvement in the employment situation which the Administration hopes eventually to extend to the bulk of relief workers.

Awaiting the employment pickup in the spring confidently predicted by the President, House Appropriations Committee leaders said relief spending policies for the new year must necessarily await winter-month developments.

Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, ranking member of the deficiencies appropriations subcommittee, said the $500,000,000 relief deficiency originally anticipated when Congress appropriated for the present year should be substantially reduced as defense work takes hold.

Congress appropriated $975,000,000, stipulating that it must be spread over at least eight months. As of November 23, $514,000,000 of this had been spent. Barring a sharp employment demand for relief workers, officials expressed doubt that the remainder would stretch far beyond the March 1 minimum limit.

The November 20 relief load marked a 20,751 increase over the preceding week, as defense activity failed to offset the normal winter relief demands.

Bright spot was the improvement shown over last year in the load. The 1,805,944 for the week ended November 20 compared with an average of 1,960,518 on the rolls in November last year. Outlays through November 23, as compared with last year, were $89,000,000 less.

Woodrum predicted the Deficiencies Appropriations subcommittee will be called together shortly after inauguration day to consider relief deficiency needs in the light of defense job absorptions.

Group Meets Today

Meanwhile, Chairman Edward T. Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee, called a preliminary meeting of the deficiency group for today. Official business was money for a carpet for the House chamber, but Taylor said the meeting will provide a forum for informal discussion of 1942 appropriation policies.

The committee is expected to fall immediately in line with the President's proposal to slash estimates for nonmilitary public works. Economy bloc spokesmen estimated that some $500,000,000 might be saved by such a program.

Meanwhile at Miami Beach, Fla., House Minority Leader Martin voiced skepticism on the program. Martin termed it "the same old stuff" and said "he just talked about it, didn't he."

Broad outlines of the Administration's tax and defense financing policies meantime were expected to be determined at a White House conference tomorrow night, before the President takes temporary leave of Washington.

Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, returning here for the conference, said he would go to the meeting with an open mind.

Others who will join the President and Treasury experts at the White House include Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee; Senator George, of Georgia, and Representative Jere Cooper, of Tennessee.

Press Attacks Rouse Japan Against Dutch

'Strong Anti-Japanese Sentiment' Claimed Among East Indies

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Thursday), Nov. 28.—Japanese newspapers, in remarkably similar phraseology, reported today a sudden burst of anger by the government against the Netherlands East Indies following "discovery" of strong anti-Japanese sentiment there.

The papers agreed in saying that the attitude of the Indies islanders had grown steadily worse since conclusion of the tripartite pact among Japan, Germany and Italy, and enumerated at length incidents not previously reported.

These were said to include beatings of Japanese and defilement of the Japanese flag.

Observers pondered the possibility that this might be the forerunner of new and stronger economic demands on the East Indies. A feeling of impatience at delay was said to have been growing since the recent return home of Commerce Minister Ichizo Kobayashi from an economic mission to Batavia.

Demands Predicted

When asked if Kobayashi would go back for new conferences, a foreign office spokesman said recently, "If he does dot, someone else will."

Observers believed further consolidation of the Japanese position in French Indo-China also to be imminent.

Domei, Japanese news agency, said yesterday that Japan soon would make a formal demand on the Indies for apologies and compensation for the alleged injuries and affronts to Japanese.

The agency said Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka would call the Netherlands minister, Gen. J. C. Pabst, to the Foreign Office for this purpose and also would demand guaranties for the future.

(The Japanese have been demanding important economic concessions in the oil and rubber-rich Dutch East Indies since the Netherlands was occupied in the German offensive through the low countries last spring.

(The Dutch islands, now in a weakened an relatively isolated position, have been caled by Japanese leaders part of the "Greater East Asia" over which Japan proposes at least an economic leadership.)

"Incidents" Are Listed

Domei listed the following alleged incidents involving Japanese:

A Dutch policeman assaulted and seriously injured a Japanese resident and his wife while they were being examined at a police station. The Japanese consul at Batavia already has protested.

An official of the Japanese consulate at Batavia was taken into custody when he passed the governor general's residence carrying a camera, but was released after police ascertained he had taken no pictures.

A Japanese flag was burned in front of a barbershop in Banjoeng.

Other minor cases of assaults on Japanese by Netherlands soldiers.

Ford Favors Two-Ocean Navy And 'Plenty of Plane Carriers'

Fleet Strong Enough to Protect Both Shores Vital to Defense, He Declares; Completes Plans for Training Station at Factory

By David J. Wilkie

Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, Nov. 27.—Henry Ford declared himself today as a "big Navy" advocate.

A Navy strong enough to protect both shores of the United States and equipped with "plenty of airplane carriers," he said, is one of the most vital factors of America's national defense.

The 77-year-old industrialist made the statement while completing plans with Rear Admiral John Downes, for the establishment of a branch of the Great Lakes naval training station at his River Rouge plant. Admiral Downes is commandant of the Ninth Naval District.

Explaining that young enlisted men sent to the Ford plant from the Great Lakes station would receive three months' courses in various mechanical and technical lines, Ford said they would also be able to continue their academic training.

"When they complete their courses here," Admiral Downes interposed, "they will go direct to the fleet."

Selected through qualifying tests at the Great Lakes station, the trainees will begin coming to the Ford plant on January 11. They will be housed in barracks already under construction. When the program is fully developed it is hoped to turn out 33 trained electricians, machinists' mates, Diesel engine operators (for submarine assignments) and others, each month. Later courses for aviation metalsmiths and aviation machinists' mates also are to be added.

"This," said Ford today, "is the best thing I know of that I could do to help the national defense. My interest in the Navy is based on the conviction that it is the most vital arm of our national defense. Our protection is the Navy's job.

"We have two oceans. What we need now is a good Navy in each of them, including plenty of airplane carriers."

Ford recalled that during the World War he had built eagle boat sub-chasers at the River Rouge plant, sliding the craft from the ways directly in the Rouge River that flows through the Ford factory grounds.

"Now," he said, "we are building four barracks buildings on the shores of the river to house the young men the Navy wants for mechanical and technical work."

Commenting on the present conflict in Europe, Ford said he was convinced neither side would win. "Nobody wins in any war and wars never settle anything," he said, and added:

"If anybody does win in this conflict we are certain to have another war."

Rear Admiral Downes said the Navy Department was most enthusiastic over the establishment of the training branch at the Ford plant. "From the chief of operations down," he said, "the plan has been received enthusiastically. We all think that it will not only be a great thing for the Navy but for the national defense as well."

Admiral Downes said that in the normal course, a Naval recruit could enter and complete his course in the Ford training unit in from five and one-half to six months after his enlistment.

None of the trainees will engage in Ford production work, it was ponted out, and being enlisted men could not be placed on the Ford pay roll.

Albanian Prince Killed by Greeks

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 27.—Brock Doda, an Albanian prince of the Mirdizia clan, has been killed in combat on the Greek front, it was announced today. He had volunteered in the Albanian Blackshirt militia and was one of the first of his countrymen to march into Greek territory.

According to Italian newspaper accounts, Prince Doda was recognized by an Albanian exile fighting for the Greeks, who called attention to him during a hand-to-hand combat. The Greeks concentrated their attack on him and he was mortally wounded.

U. S.-Soviet Talks Resumed Here

Welles-Oumansky Discussions Are Paralleled in London

Conferences between State Department officials and Soviet Ambassador Constantine A. Oumansky, were resumed yesterday, after a break occasioned by the visit to Berlin of the Soviet Premier, Vyacheslav Molotoff, and the possibility that the Soviet Union might enter into closer relations with Germany.

Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, talked with Oumansky for nearly an hour and a half, but neither would comment at the end of the meeting, each contenting himself with saying that it was another of the series of meetings which have been going on for some time with the purpose of regularizing Soviet-American relations as much as is possible under present international conditions.

Thus far, the talks have for the most part resulted in minor gains for the Soviet Union. Oumansky has been able to obtain the charter of American vessels to transport about 500,000 barrels of oil to the Soviet Far East. This relieved pressure on the Soviet trans-Siberian Railroad, so that other supplies could be shipped to Siberia from European Russia.

Wouldn't Leave Margin

On the other hand, this amount of oil is not considered sufficient to free large quantities of Soviet oil in western Russia for delivery to the German armed forces.

The talks also have resulted in the release of some of the machine tools which the Soviet government had on order in this country, and which were held up because they might be used in the defense industry.

None of the underlying differences between the two governments have been changed by the talks, it is understood, despite the settlement of minor disagreements. The moral embargo on aviation gasoline to the Soviet Union, resulting from the bombing of Finnish cities during the Soviet-Finnish War last winter, has not been removed, and there is no present indication that the American government will do anything in this direction.

The talks are a parallel action to an attempt by the British government to establish better relations with the Soviet Union and win them away from cooperation with Germany, but thus far reports in Washington do not indicate that Great Britain has been successful, though the British government also has made concessions to Moscow.

Informed sources do not see the possibility for a break between the Soviet Union and Germany at any point in the near future. The Soviet government is believed to be too weak to risk any break while the German armies are intact and Chancellor Hitler is able to concentrate large numbers of troops on his eastern frontier.

Another subject which is a matter for discussion between the State Department and the Soviet government is the question of the deportation of Mrs. Earl Browder, wife of the secretary of the American Communist Party. According to the usual procedure in such cases the Department of Justice must ask the State Department to inquire of the Soviet government whether it will receive the person to be deported. According to the Department of Justice's recent announcement, action is planned in the case, but State Department officials were unable to say last night whether that had been a topic of the conversation today.

Britain to Get Half of 1,600 Cannon Planes Now on Order

By the Associated Press

The Army's newest cannon-equipped pursuit planes have undergone rapid-fire tests with great success, it was announced yesterday, and authoritative sources asserted the manufacturer had orders for approximately 1,600 of the swift fighters, half of them for Great Britain.

The plane, known as the Bell "Airacobra," is armed with a 37-millimeter cannon as well as machine guns. The Army said accelerated firing tests of all the plane's weapons were carried out off Fort Niagara with "satisfactory results."

The Army reported "great accuracy" at long ranges was achieved with the cannon, which shoots through the plane's propeller hub. Authorities predicted the British would find it extremely effective against enemy bombers.

The Royal Air Force's best fighter planes, armed with eight machine guns, virtually have to saw a wing or tail assembly off a German bomber to disable it, they said. But they declared that a single well-placed shot from an "Aircobra's" cannon would do the trick.

Meanwhile, in another phase of the nation's expansion program, Navy officials suggested that some of the 48 new "blimps" for which Congress has voted funds might be used in connection with the neutrality patrol. They said that rigid airships would be better suited to the purpose, but Congressional approval of new dirigible construction would be required.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP).—Army tests of a 37-millimeter cannon carried by an "Airacobra" interceptor pursuit plane were described by a representative of the manufacturer today as "absolutely simulating wartime conditions."

A spokesman for the Bell Aircraft Corporation said one plane and its pilot made 15 flights in one day from the Buffalo Airport, a total of approximately eight hours in the air for man and machine.

The procedure was to refuel and reload with ammunition and then take off again after each firing test, as if pressed for time in actual combat.

Two Get 6-Month Terms for Joyride On $15,000 Cruiser

Two men began 6-month jail sentences last night for a two-hour joyride Monday aboard the luxurious 65-foot cabin cruiser of Dr. Valentine Hess, 900 Seventeenth Street Northwest.

Charged with taking property without right, the men, Charles H. Kersey, 38, and William E. King, 58, were arraigned before Police Court Judge George N. Neilson yesterday.

It was testified the defendants were employed to paint the boat—Sea King II—and had moved it from its moorings at the foot of Thirteenth Street Southwest to the foot of Eleventh Street Southeast. The two were arrested on board by Policemen C. A. Parker and E. J. Spence, of the harbor precinct.

Dr. Hess told the court the men had no authority to move the craft and that the boat, valued at $15,000, was damaged to the extent of $500.

Kersey's argument that the run was made to warn the motors was futile and Judge Neilson sentenced both men to pay $100 fines or spend 180 days in jail.

Radio Demonstration

Oscar Reed and William Smith, radio engineers, will give a demonstration in frequency modulation at a meeting of the Central Y. M. C. A. Amateur Radio Club at 9 p. m. tomorrow in the building, 1736 G Street Northwest. The demonstration will be part of the program for the class in radio theory.

Modern Pilgrims Wink At History in Pageant

Mayflower Descendants Show Women And Children as Being Among First To Land; Records Show Affair Was Stag

By the Associated Press

Plymouth, Mass., Nov. 27.—Descendants of the Mayflower pilgrims, on the eve of their observance of the "first Thanksgiving," winked at historical accuracy tonight in favor of "popular tradition" regarding the landing of their forefathers at Plymouth.

In a pageant to be presented tomorrow when 16 States, including all New England, observe the holiday, they will enact a scene in which men, women and children will be shown stepping gingerly onto Plymouth Rock as "first" arrivals—even though Colonial Gov. William Bradford recorded that the first landing party was strictly stag.

"We are going to follow tradition instead of strict history in the matter," said Miss Rose Briggs, of Plymouth's Antiquarian Society, one of the arrangers of the tableau.

"What actually happened back in 1620 was that an exploring expedition of men put off in a small boat from the Mayflower when it was anchored off Provincetown. They sought a place for the voyagers to settle, and they were the first to land at Plymouth."

But she said that picture "probably hasn't caught the public fancy in such a way as having everybody spill out of the boat at once," and so Plymouth will string along with old wives' tales that have it that such women as dainty Mary Chilton were in the first boatload.

The "landing" tableau is one of three to be given. Another will be the reenactment of the signing of the "Mayflower Compact" which is regarded as a pattern of democracy in the New World. The third will be a dramatization of the "first Thanksgiving" of the Pilgrim colonists and their Indian friends, highlighted by a feast that will include representative products of most of the States of the Union.

The pageant will be held in Plymouth's Memorial Hall, a modern structure that contrasts with ancient buildings which still husband the colonial tone in this seaside town.

Volunteer workers plodded through snow in the hummocky inland hills today to bring back the last of the small fir and pine trees that will transform the pageant hall into a woodland scene by dawn.

The other States, besides New England having Thanksgiving tomorrow, instead of last Thursday as the President proclaimed, are Arkansas, Florida, North Carolina, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Kansas, Iowa, South Dakota, Pennsylvania and Nevada.

Men called into the Army under the Selective Service program appeared to be the principal sufferers from the dual Thanksgiving situation (after the turkeys). Selects from Pennsylvania and Kansas, for whom last Thursday was just a turkey-less weekday at home, will find themselves encamped today in adjoining states where the celebration is all over.

The "second Thanksgiving" will see a number of football games, including three in states where it's just plain Thursday.

In Pennsylvania it will be a second holiday for the employes of banks, most of which closed last week, and for several cities. Pottsville will hold a third Thanksgiving next Thursday, by proclamation of the mayor, to give thanks for new industrial plants.

'Angels Over Broadway' Brings Light Into the Night

Ben Hecht's New Picture at Metropolitan Is Enlivening Vehicle for an Ace Cast In Which Thomas Mitchell Soars Again

AN INEFFECTUAL LITTLE PIPSQUEAK, on the brink of suicide because he cannot replace the $3,000 he has embezzled to gratify the granite whims of a mistress with a red-headed outlook upon life; a Broadway grifter, looking for a lucky "7" and a cut of the "take;" a sort of glorified Eliza Doolittle—"I'm a good gel, I am"—seeking to ward off starvation with a dancing engagement in any Stygian deadfall, and a dilapidated playwright, with such ideals as he has left preserved in alcohol. These are the characters upon which Ben Hecht, author, producer and director, pivots his "Angels Over Broadway," the Columbia release that comes to the screen of the Metropolitan Theater this morning.

BELL

If this sounds dangerously like something you have seen many times before, it isn't. Mr. Hecht has brought a freshness of dialogue and treatment to his fable that is as interesting as it is enlivening. None of his temporarily submerged figures is pompously or sentimentally exalted; none is blasted by any arbitrary condemnation. There is no villain in the piece. Events springing naturally from the viewpoints, precarious circumstances and hazy inspirations of the quartet, accidentally thrown together in the night, finally bring things out right side up, if not wholly according to the pattern of the aspirations originally held by each.

It is not so much what Charles Engle, Bill O'Brien, Nina Barona and Gene Gibbons do and say as the manner in which they do it and the pungency of their thoughts as expressed in Mr. Hecht's incisive dialogue that makes "Angels Over Broadway" notable. It is neither "big" nor especially important, except in the measure of entertainment it is able to afford. It puts the poker table to new and admirable uses and points character with cameo sharpness. Furthermore, the lines and action are packed with laughs for those with receptive ears for the author's brittle cynicisms. And the cast has something to do with it, too.

John Qualen, as the suicidal nonentity, is a perfect selection for the part of the timorous little guy trying to masquerade as a "big shot" bogged down with gold, and Rita Hayworth, as the clear-sighted youngster with a steady eye to the eternal verities, acquits herself with more than ordinary credit. She was a "good gel" and as the major symbol of the play's regenerative power is the one who does most to hoist Bill O'Brien out of the social gutters. As coproducer and star of the picture, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., turns in a nice job as O'Brien, the weasel with his fingers always itching for a safe and solid "percentage." He struggles a little now and again to pardon his English accent and appear appropriately tough, but is an oily number, at that—until the final fadeout.

But it is the stalwart Thomas Mitchell who runs away with the footage, as the derelict playwright who has tumbled from the peak into the abyss. Into his mouth Hecht has poured the most humorously cynical words of wisdom heard on the screen in many a long day and night of film gazing. After he passes out, he doesn't remember any of it, to be sure, but his biting observations upon the gaudy bauble known as life have set the wheels turning and charted the course for those he rescues by his visions in the bottom of a bottle. Mitchell never has been better.

There are, of course, others in the cast—that roomful of plundering thugs who eventually get plundered, for example—but they do not so much matter. With the exception of Constance Worth, that is, who furnishes the shady inspiration for some of Mr. Mitchell's most cogent commentaries upon the predatory sirens who snuggle briefly in gaily feathered love nests.

And that isn't all, the new bill at the Metropolitan also embraces a Walter Catlett comedy, "Blondes and Blunders"—which, presumably might go equally for brunettes—a short journey "Down the Thames;" a Merrie Melodie cartoon-comedy, "Bedtime for Sniffles," and the composite newsreel to supplement the hectic Hecht.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 27.

A YOUNG LADY presented herself Monday at the Sam Harris office to apply for a job in Moss Hart's new play, "Lady in the Dark." She told Hart that she'd like the job of understudy to Gertrude Lawrence, who will star in the show . . . The playwright, who had written "Lady in the Dark" especially for Miss Lawrence, assured the applicant that no understudy would be necessary—that Miss Lawrence's role was such an important one no performances could be given without her . . . "Her role in 'Susan and God' was just as important," the young lady protested, "and I was the understudy there" . . . "My dear young lady," replied Moss Hart, "if you were the understudy in 'Susan and God'—then you must have understudied God."

SOME OF THE PERSONS mentioned in Representative Dies' "White Paper" have consulted their lawyers about suing for libel—on the grounds that this report was not privileged and that the legislative immunity from legal responsibility does not apply . . . Dorothy Parker will be at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital for two weeks. She was operated upon there last Saturday.

THE PHRASE "What do you hear from the mob?" already is established in American slang. It has been used repeatedly in Hollywood and in popular songs. It was first introduced by John O'Hara in a double-talk story called "Portistan on the Portis," which was published by the New Yorker magazine a few years ago. It was a story of a prizefight manager who was identified only as "Hymie." O'Hara described him as a man who "has the expression you think you see in the pictures of cops whose widows received yesterday the Departmental Medal of Honor" . . . District Attorney O'Dwyer expects this week to indict "Hymie," the originator of "What do you hear from the mob?" He is Hymie Caplin, manager of Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins, who was arrested last week and accused of being head of an international mob of phony cardsharks.

MRS. JIMMY WALKER is in Palm Beach for the season . . . Phil Silvers, whose role in the Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland movie, "Strike Up the Band," was cut by the producer, rescued the cut portions to use as screen tests with which to impress other producers. "They should be impressed," Silvers explains, "seeing Garland and Rooney playing opposite me in a screen test" . . . Grover Whalen has opened personal offices in the Empire State Building.

Random House, which will publish William Saroyan's collection of short stories, wired the author requesting that he submit an introduction for the book. Forty-eight hours later they received a 6,000-word introduction which began: "Is Saroyan a short-story writer? Yes. He won the O. Henry Prize. Is he a playwright? Yes. He won the Drama Critics Circle Award and the Pulitzer Prize. Is he a genius? Decidedly. Did he write 'Hamlet?' No. That was another W. S.—William Shakespeare" . . . Saroyan who refused the gold medal and $1,000 check from the Pulitzer Prize committee, finally accepted a silver medal in recognition of his work. It was awarded by a small Armenian society in his native Fresno. He took it because his mother said she'd like to own that medal.

OSCAR LEVANT is scoffing at the reports from Hollywood that he plans to do a lecture tour with Harpo Marx. "Of what use," he explains, "would Harpo, the silent one, be on a lecture platform?" . . . Hollywood, Nov. 27.

Once a year James Ellison, who plays opposite Kay Francis in "Play Girl," goes out to a little cafe near U. C. L. A. where he worked as a part-time janitor while putting himself through college. Next he visits a grocery store where he clerked on Saturdays. Then he lunches at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, where he was locker-room boy, and tops off with a round of golf at the Midwick Country Club, where he was a goal boy for years. Then he pinches himself to remind himself how lucky he is today.

'Escape' Enters Second Tense Week at Palace

Shearer and Taylor Head Strong Cast In Thrilling Story

To more than one filmgoer the title "Escape" is the one thread of hope to cling to during Emmy Ritter's terrifying flight from the Nazis. The Palace's notable screen adaptation of last season's best-seller, issued under the nom-deplume of Ethel Vance, this morning begins its second week on F Street.

So inextricable seems the position of the aging actress caught in the net of the secret police, that on more than one occasion all appears lost. She is still a German citizen, noted in hes earlier years as an actress, but her son, born in America, is an American citizen. She returned to the Bavaria of 1936 to settle her business affairs, but ahead of her flew news of the help she had given refugees from the Nazi tyranny when they arrived in the new world. As we all know, a person of property is of inestimably minor value to the Nazi brigands compared with his worldly goods. So Emmy Ritter was to be shot.

How she eludes her fate is told in "Escape" through the eyes of her American son, driven from wall to wall in his efforts to find her. Those who help him are few, but fortunately placed. A charming countess is the mistress of a powerful general. A doctor, whom he meets by chance cares for Emmy Ritter in a concentration prison. An old servant buries the dead of the camp.

A Masterful Adaptation

To be sure, from such an outline, the long arm of coincidence seems much in evidence. But so artfully was the original story told, so masterfully has it been adapted to the screen by radio's Arch Oboler and Marguerite Roberts, that the pulse of excitment is in each scene; conviction is never lacking.

This skillfully written script has the good fortune to be played by an able, knowing cast, blending into an integrated whole rather than a series of outstanding portrayals. Robert Taylor is the young American, Norma Shearer the helpful countess, and Nazimova the stunned actress, whose training in stage make-up saves her life. A newcomer is Philip Dorn, topnotch as the doctor, obviously beginning a long Hollywood career.

Notwithstanding "Escape's" powerful indictment of a system opposed to our own, its greatest strength is that it is a gripping story, excitingly told.

Columbia

This season's most controversial film—thus far—begins its fourth week on F Street this morning. After two at the Palace, "The Great Dictator" is commencing a second at the Columbia. Showings are on a continuous basis and at advanced prices.

The Charlie Chaplin of the past is in "The Great Dictator," as is a Charlie of 1940, an angry, bitter, snarling Charlie, a clouded mirror of our time's most hated figure, Dictator Hynkel, of Tomania. Playing a dual role, Chaplin slips from Hebrew barber to depraved Fooey, including in the latter impersonation a scene unique to the films. With a delicate globe, he captures in Chaplinesque pantomime that all-pervading notion that the head of a nation with which this country is at peace is a madman. It's a chilling spectacle.

Paulette Goddard is his leading woman, as she was in the "Modern Times" of five years ago. Jack Oakie is splendidly amusing as a beefier dictator, Napolini, and Billy Gilbert, Reginald Gardiner and Maurice Moscovitch are others in the leading roles.

Submarine Battle In Timely Movie

With thrilling submarine battle sequences completed, Director John Brahm this week was preparing for previews of "Escape to Glory," the Columbia picture starring Constance Bennett and Pat O'Brien, which was made under the title, "Passage West."

"Escape to Glory" is a timely drama based upon the experiences of a group of people aboard a refugee ship bound for America from the war zone. In the cast are John Halliday, Marjorie Gateson, Edgar Buchanan, Melville Cooper, Frank Sully, Francois Pierlot and Erwin Kaiser.

Desert Enthusiast

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Cleveland, Nov. 27 (INS).—It's been many a long moon since an actor hit the top the way James Stephenson did in "The Letter." Critics all over the country went into raves over him—many going as far as to say he almost stole the picture from Bette Davis. Be that as it may, Jack Warner and Hal Wallis well know they have a new star in this fine actor for now comes word that Stephenson and Geraldine Fitzgerald will be costarred in "Winged Victory," by Dr. A. J. Cronin. The picture gets under way December 16.

PARSONS

Interesting, I think, that both these new stars got their big breaks in Bette Davis pictures—Geraldine in "Dark Victory" and Stephenson in "The Letter." Hollywood is the most amazing town in the world. Just a few months ago Stephenson was playing small roles in "B" pictures—now he's the talk of the country. Howard Koch, who scripted "The Letter," will also script "Winged Victory."

Nancy Kelly arrived back in Hollywood from New York just in time to go into "Uncensored," with John Loder. They will be costarred and I hope this will be the break Nancy has been waiting for on her home lot. No young player ever got off to a better start than Nancy when she was originally signed by Twentieth. But somehow she got lost in the shuffle and hasn't made a picture at her alma mater since February. She's a pretty girl, wears clothes well and she's a good little actress. And what is more important, she is completely over the mannerisms, particularly of drawing her mouth down at the corners, that marked her first performances.

Fan letters are starting on casting suggestions for "For Whom the Bell Tolls." Particularly interesting, I think, are Gertrude Miller's ideas: "I can't agree that Gary Cooper is the perfect type for Robert Jordon. Preston Foster is more the type Hemingway describes. Paulette Goddard is an excellent choice for "Maria" and Akim Tamiroff would be very good for "Pablo," don't you think? Last, but far from least, wouldn't Marjorie Rambeau be wonderful as 'Pilar?'" One nice thing about Gertrude's suggestions is that most of her candidates are under contract to Para which would solve a hatful of problems.

We've had a lot of fun with Sabu. He has received word that he, his brother Shaik and his tutor, Austin Menzies, are going to Canada on personal appearances starting December 22. We told Sabu we would buy him a fur turban and that the snow is so deep it will come up to his forehead. If you think that bothered him, you're mistaken. The little "elephant boy" is going over great in Cleveland and I believe this tour will help him and bring in great returns for "The Thief of Bagdad." Everywhere Sabu goes he makes so many friends.

Snapshots of Hollywood and Cleveland collected at random: Looks as if the next contract feud will be between Bill Holden and Columbia. He's telling friends he won't do "The Vigilantes" until there's an adjustment in his salary; George Raft and Virginia Field continue to be soooo secretive about their dates. They're dodging the popular places to dine tete-a-tete in the candlelight spots; Bill Gargan is ill in Palm Springs with an ear infection; the Marx Brothers swan song for M-G-M will be "Step This Way," a department store yarn, which starts the first of the year.

Lincoln, Nebr., is the next city chosen for a world premiere. Dick Rowland will take "Cheers for Miss Bishop" there January 7. It's the home of Bess Streeter Aldrich, author of the novel. Martha Scott and all members of the cast will take the Lincoln jaunt; Warners preview junket for "Santa Fe Trail" gets bigger and bigger. They're taking along Virginia Field, Roy Rogers, Rita Hayworth, Ida Lupino and Johnny Weissmuller in addition to the rest of the cast. The club car will be completely redecorated as a prairie schooner.

The Brian Donlevys, who move to their new 3-acre place in Brentwood soon, gave a farewell party to their old house last night. A "house cooling" as it were? The guests were Annabella and Tyrone Power, the Harry Brands, Bill Seiter and Marion Nixon; it's date after date with Jack Dempsey and Arline Judge; Bill Smith, Ethel Merman's bridegroom, made a flying trip to the Coast where he's pulling up stakes so he can remain permanently in the East; Earl Carroll has wired Schiaparelli to ask her to do the evening gowns for his new show.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Food, Housing Of D. C. Guard Pose Problem

Men May Be Bedded At Home Between Call, Departure for Camp

By Marshall Andrews

Lacking an adequate armory, the District National Guard will face a delicate problem in maintaining military efficiency without overstepping legal bounds when it mobilizes for a year's training some time between January 3 and 18.

It will be the Government's responsibility, once they are in Federal service, to house the enlisted Guardsmen and to give them three meals a day with no expense to the men. This, under conditions here, it will not be able to do.

Though it has had 80 years in which to think up resourceful expedients for adapting makeshift quarters to its needs, the Guard has not before been faced with a situation like that now approaching. High Guard officials were unable yesterday to recollect a like condition anywhere else in the United States.

When the District's approximately 2,250 officers and men of the National Guard are inducted into Federal service in January, there will be no place for them to stay until they leave for Fort George G. Meade. There will be no facilities for feeding them, except such as individual unit commanders may devise.

May Sleep at Home

Commanding officers of the four major units in the Guard yesterday admitted that circumstances probably would force them to permit the majority of their men to sleep at home during the 10 days or so they remain here for physical examinations, checking equipment and the like. However, they confessed there was no way legally to compensate them for transportation between home and the armory and that if any man refused to go home at his own expense other arrangements would have to be made for him.

The matter of feeding the men, while it presents difficulties, is slightly less complicated. By contract with restaurants, by purchasing sandwiches and coffee or by setting up field kitchens, somewhere the troops will be fed. Here, though, occurs the difficulty of furnishing breakfast to the men who sleep at home without requiring them to report at unseemly hours in the morning or leaving it up to them to feed themselves.

While the District Guard scrambles for its food and shelter for ten days or so, a modern $2,700,000 armory will be rising at the end of East Capitol Street, an armory for which the Guard alternately battled and begged Congress and the District Commissioners for 32 years. It will be completed too late for the Guard to use before it goes into training.

May Set Up Camp

When the 121st Engineers assemble at the present armory, the ancient and decrepit National Hotel, Sixth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, most of its men will be permitted to spend their nights at home under tentative plans laid by Col. John W. Oehmann, its commander.

If possible, men of the 260th Coast Artillery, commanded by Col. Walter W. Burns, will be quartered in a tent camp on the Mall or at Camp Simms, except for guard details at the armory, if such a schedule can be arranged.

Men of the Twenty-ninth Division Special Troops, commanded by Lieut. Col. William T. Roy, will be brought together and held together as a unit if at all possible, Col. Roy said. He expects to begin an intensive refresher course at once, he said, "in how to be a soldier." The First Battalion, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, probably will permit most of its men to sleep at home, said Maj. Fletcher F. Bernsdorff, commanding officer.

The District National Guard has not had an armory building of its own since 1860, when an armory built in 1856 at Sixth Street and Independence Avenue Southwest was taken over for a military hospital. In 1908 a commission was appointed to lay plans for an adequate armory, but nothing tangible was done until construction was started last June on East Capitol Street.

When last mobilized, in 1916 for service on the Mexican border, the District Guard had fairly adequate quarters over old Central Market. When that building was torn down in 1930, the Guard was moved first into a building now used as a warehouse at 427 L Street Northwest, then into temporary buildings (World War Government Hotels) at North Capitol and D Streets. Nine years ago it moved into the 123-year-old National Hotel, already condemned as unsafe, and there it has remained.

Plans Are Due Within 2 Weeks For New $400,000 Cosmos Club

Architects Preparing Building Sketches For Edifice on H Between 17th and 18th; English 'Basement' Interior Studied

Members of the Cosmos Club soon may see what kind of new $400,000 clubhouse is to be built for them on the north side of H Street between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets Northwest.

Architects for the club are preparing sketches for the building that will replace the club's more than century-old quarters in the Madison and Tayloe residences at H Street and Madison Place Northwest, club officers said yesterday. The plans, it was said, are expected to be ready for study at the latest within two weeks.

Interior details of the building which is to be of the English "basement" type, are being studied by club committees in conjunction with the architects, Arthur Heaton and Francis Sullivan. In conforming with this type of building, entrance would be on the street level admitting to reception lounge and offices.

The main lounge, to be a reproduction of the old club lounge, including the original fireplace, and library and living rooms will be on the second floor. It is expected that the main dining room will be on the top floor with a dining terrace on the roof for summer use.

A garden also is included in preliminary plans now being studied, and it is possible that members may decide to use this as a summer dining room.

Other features of the new building will include 40 bedrooms, each with private bath, and a modern auditorium.

The Federal Government acquired the present quarters of the Cosmos Club last August with a check for $1,000,000, of which $200,000 has been used in the purchase by the club of its new site. A second check, for $400,000, at the same time purchased for the Government the old Belasco Theater, the two purchases completing Federal property holdings along Madison Place from Pennsylvania Avenue to H Street.

The old building which the Cosmos Club is expected to occupy until the new clubhouse is finished, eventually will be used for offices by Treasury Department agencies now in rented quarters.

The theater is being converted into file-storage space for the use of the Treasury Department's disbursing office at Madison Place and Pennsylvania Avenue. The work of removing theater seats and of leveling floors has been virtually completed. An opening will be cut through the walls from the upper floors of the disbursing office to the theater.

Reporters Merged To Get Film Type

All the newspapermen who were personal friends of George Stevens in his early San Francisco days have been blended into the reporter character Cary Grant plays, with Irene Dunne as his wife, in Columbia's "Penny Serenade," which Stevens is producing and directing.

"None of them was anything like the newspaper characters so mistakenly pictured on the screen," said Stevens. "They were average, normal humans. Only one was a heavy drinking man so, in his memory, I am permitting Grant to enjoy just one brief toot in the picture."

Judge Says 'Bunny' Should Be Spanked

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

ARABELLA (BUNNY) HARTLEY,
pretty 23-year-old model, is shown leaving Yorkville, N. Y., court after judge told her she needed "a good old-fashioned strapping." Provoked by her quarrels with her former husband, James Barry Feely, 32, which have brought them in and out of his courtroom several times, Magistrate William E. Ringel convicted "Bunny" of disorderly conduct and suspended a sentence of 10 days in the workhouse

D. C. Health Record Improves

A report issued yesterday by the Census Bureau reveals that the Capital's public health record, not long ago one of the worst in the country, is on its way to becoming one of the best.

The pneumonia and tuberculosis mortality rates dropped to all-time lows in 1939. Deaths from the former numbered 71.5 per 100,000 population, compared with 81.8 the previous year and 123.6 in 1937.

There were 64.5 fatal cases of tuberculosis, a drop of 6 per cent from 1938 and 25 per cent from 1937. However, the District Health Department shows a 1939 mortality of 87.4 because it includes deaths occurring in the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium at Glenn Dale, Md., which the Census Bureau does not.

The 1939 infant mortality rate of 47.7 per 1,000 live births was the lowest recorded in the District since 1929. Maternal mortality dropped from 5.6 per 1,000 births in 1938 to 5.2 last year.

Gratified by the improved showing, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, commented that it demonstrated the soundness of the investment of funds for public health.

A birth rate percentage of 21.6 per 1,000 population also was the highest since 1929. Likewise, the ratio of births to deaths reached the peak for the 11-year period. Last year the District had 14,037 births and 3,292 deaths.

A slight rise was noted in the death rate, which went from 12.6 per 1,000 population in 1938 to 12.8 last year.

Roughly, four deaths in every ten which occurred in the District last year were caused by heart disease, cancer or nephritis 'Bright's disease). The former, in one form or another, was among the five leading cause of death in every age group over five years. Cancer and nephritis fatalities, however, were predominantly in the older age groups.

July was the stork's favorite month in 1939, wehn he delivered 1,283 babies. January, when respiratory diseases were most numerous, was the "deadliest" month, with 774 deaths.

The largest number of infants—4,098—were born to women in the 20-24 age group. Those from 25 to 29 years old ran a close second, with 4,026 deliveries. Two sets of triplets and 132 sets of twins were included in the 1939 consignments.

Finally, the Census Bureau pointed out that 45 babies were born in the District last year to child-mothers between 10 and 14 years of age.

Equal Justice

Justice in the South is being greatly strengthened by Supreme Court decisions requiring the States to grant their citizens "the equal protection of the laws." A consistent line of opinions from the high bench has invalidated convictions or indictments of Negroes by juries from which members of that race have been systematically excluded. Now the court has gone a step further by reversing the conviction of a Negro youth in Harris County, Texas, because the local officials made only a pretense at including Negroes in grand juries.

The reasoning of the court, as outlined by Justice Black, is unassailable. "The fact that the written words of a State's laws hold out a promise that no such discrimination will be practiced is not enough," he writes. "The Fourteenth Amendment requires that equal protection to all must be given—not merely promised. . . . If there has been discrimination, whether accomplished ingeniously or ingenuously, the conviction cannot stand." An essential element of "equal protection" is indictment or trial by a jury selected without prejudice against the defendant. Where Negroes are excluded from juries, or granted only token representation, the danger of unjust convictions becomes very real.

In effect the States have been put on notice that enforcement of their laws, so far as Negroes are concerned, can be attained only by systematic avoidance of racial discrimination in jury service. It is now crystal clear, thanks to the forthright stand the Supreme Court has taken, that convictions will not be upheld if any element of a fair and unprejudiced trial is omitted. By this means the court is bringing very real pressure upon the Southern States to modify practices which all too frequently have mocked the concept "equal justice under law."

There is cause for general satisfaction every time the Constitution is thus invoked to protect minority rights. By this means the principles of democracy can be ever more firmly rooted in our political thought and practice. By this means State law-enforcement systems will be improved at their weakest points. Nor should we overlook the fact that the constructive method by which the Supreme Court is dealing with this difficult problem is precisely the opposite from that prescribed by the unconstitutional anti-lynching bill. By such decisions the court throws back upon the States full responsibility for correcting defects in their law-enforcement systems, instead of breaking down that responsibility, as the anti-lynching bill would tend to do.

Cooperation Is Vital

A strong determination to prevent strikes which delay the defense program is taking shape in Washington. Officials in both the executive and legislative branches of the Government seem to be in general agreement that there must be no repetition of the experience at Downey, Calif., where work on military aircraft was held up for 12 days during the settlement of a labor dispute. Further strike delays would certainly bring about restrictive legislation.

The feeling against strikes of this character is so strong that there is a very real danger that Congress might go too far in curtailing the right of labor to walk out when it is dissatisfied with working conditions. Chairman Sumners reports that the House Judiciary Committee is in agreement that defense plants must be kept open as a matter of public policy. "Whatever is necessary to keep them open," he said, "must be done." Congress is in no mood to permit delay in the defense program for any purpose.

It is well to remember, however, that restriction of the right to strike is a delicate problem even in times of emergency. Without the goodwill of labor, as Bernard Baruch has pointed out, speed in the production of weapons would be impossible. The cooperation of organized labor is no less essential than the cooperation of industry, for most of our new implements of war are being manufactured in private plants, and the successful operation of those plants depends upon a smooth-working relationship between all the groups concerned.

The present talk about abolishing strikes is somewhat comparable to the cry of "Draft industry!" when the compulsory military training bill was under consideration. When Congress acted, of course, it rejected the idea that industries should be taken over by the Government merely because the draft had become necessary to strengthen our armed forces. It provided only that the plants of recalcitrant companies refusing to cooperate on reasonable terms should be temporarily taken over.

Certainly no harsher terms should be applied to labor. What is needed is a means of assuring fair treatment to workers when they agree to remain on the job while negotiations as to working conditions are going forward. Strikes that might jeopardize our national defense cannot be tolerated any more than recalcitrance on the part of industry can be. But that is only one side of the problem. In the discussions now going forward means of protecting the essence of collective bargaining must go hand in hand with means of curbing delays.

Loans To Britain

There has been a lot of loose talk that Britain is scraping the bottom of the barrel in financing arms purchases from America. The bottom isn't yet in sight. At the same time the British are compelled to budget their resources on a theory which is supported increasingly by the evidence that this wasting war is likely to be prolonged. The Associated Press' Drew Middleton, for instance, says that the Britons who formerly talked of a British offensive in 1941 are now speaking of 1943 and 1944. In these circumstances the British, with elementary prudence, are compelled to mobilize their credit as well as their assets.

At the outbreak of war the liquid investments of the British Empire available for immediate use in this country—that is, bank balances, gold, and American securities—amounted to at least five billions of dollars. In addition, the British owned factories and other "direct" assets in the United States totaling about a billion and a half dollars. Then there is the imputed value of colonies in this hemisphere, which, as Hamilton Fish has said, have suddenly acquired a strategic value to the United States which cannot be assayed by any rule of accountancy. Aside from the colonies, therefore, the British had on hand about $6,500,000,000.

How much of this huge sum has been drawn upon in making arms purchases is not entirely a matter of guesswork. The commodity balance of trade between the British Empire and the United States during the first year of the war—that is, down to September—showed an export balance of around $700,000,000 in favor of the United States. As against this sum the United States bought British services of various kinds, including insurance. Also, we imported British gold to the amount of $750,000,000. Theoretically, therefore, the British were able to finance the first year of war out of current operations, without any impairment of liquid resources. The barrel, in other words, is still intact.

However, this isn't the whole story. The British have been letting out contracts to American concerns in a quantity far in excess of their purchases, and, in view of the killing effect of Nazi bombing on British industrial areas, these contracts are likely to grow into a flood. Only a seventh of the plane contracts which were placed before the plan for a 12,000-plane deal, for instance, have been delivered. Moreover, a vast but unknown amount of American plants for turning out the munitions on order is being directly financed by British capital. The prospective outlay entailed in these contracts and this plant expansion will certainly cause the British to dip deep into their barrel.

Naturally the British would be able to plan their war effort more efficiently and to fight with even greater spirit if they knew in advance that their purchases would eventually be shored up by American credit. They know they won't get credit merely for the asking. Statutes are on the books which prohibit lending to belligerents, and the repeal problem is one for Congress. The American public on their part feel that they shouldn't bail out Britain's American holdings till they know that there has been a sizable liquidation of those holdings. But we have no doubt of the answer of the American people when the proper time comes for consideration of credits to fighting Britain. It will be yes. The aid-for-Britain movement is running so strong that assistance even "at the risk of war" has won the allegiance of 50 per cent of the latest straw poll conducted by the Gallup organization.

Theodore Roosevelt used to say that you can never go wrong if you rely on the common-sense of the American people. When they have the facts, the people do the right thing, even if it means an about-face. And the facts are that if Britain doesn't win this war, our country will be saddled with a military establishment costing tens of billions of dollars and transforming this country of ours into an armed camp. "The commonest error of statesmanship," said Lord Salisbury, "is to cling to the carcasses of dead policies." The verdict of the last election showed pretty clearly that no such error can be put at the door of the American electorate, and that should tone down even the rigidity of those of the people's representatives who call themselves isolationists.

In the meantime several misconceptions should be cleared away. First, to expect the British to dump all their holdings on the American market would be to condemn ourselves to continually depressed markets. Secondly, Britain's Latin-American holdings are required for Britain's purchases in Latin-America. And even if they weren't so required, where is the market in our country for South American bonds? We have our own quota, and to spare. Finally, in logic, aid to Britain cannot be limited to cash on the barrelhead when you are once convinced that the cause is not only just but also a concern of America's so vital as to be making millions of Americans think of the British as "substitutes."

The Academic Blues

Our candid and well intentioned advice to the wives of all university professors is for them to get their husbands to bed as quickly as possible and to make sure that plenty of ice packs and sedatives are within reach of the sickroom. Nobody can deny that the intellectual climate of this land has lately grown very unstable and treacherous, and the wisest of us should not venture abroad these days without a good stout pair of philosophic galoshes. But the professors, poor devils, should stay indoors entirely, since they are obviously an easier prey than other folk to that deadly microbe, jitterococus damphoolius americanus.

The first symptom of infection is the sudden sensation that everything and everybody, but especially the young, have suddenly become rotten and decadent as in late Imperial Rome or in Babylon before the Medes and Persians took it over. "Soft and lacking in virility" is the way President E. A. Cross of the University of Colorado, for instance, describes our modern American youth. Obviously he needs attention, though a worse case is that of Dr. Pitirim A. Sorokin, the eminent sociologist of the still more eminent Harvard University. Like Dr. Cross, Prof. Sorokin finds the students "morally and physically softened." Harvard itself, that one time transcendental citadel of plain living and high thinking, has become, it seems, a veritable Sybaris, where even the beds are too soft and the students spend too much time in them. But even at that Dr. Sorokin is a shade less advanced in the premonitory signs of the pedagogic jaundice than his colleague Dr. Earnest Hooton, the anthropologist. Dr. Hooton thinks that not only college students but all the human race is deteriorating so rapidly, biologically and anatomically, as to be destined to almost certain extinction. Hoots, mon!

In the interest, presumably, of national regeneration Dr. Sorokin proposes a scientific test of moral fiber. It is a test at which the Fathers of the Desert themselves might well have faltered. Prof. Sorokin suggests that each student be required to spend three days in the constant presence of luscious and tempting foods and of flimsily clad nymphs from Hollywood. These would loll languidly on chaises longues while the student worked over his examinations. If under such circumstance the young man finds it possible to concentrate exclusively on such things as integral calculus he can be duly certified as having "character." For this case the medico should certainly be summoned.

A special set of symptoms is reported in the case of Prof. J. Barkley Rosser, of Cornell. Prof. Rosser is demonstrating by means of a new-fangled "many-valued logic" a reductio ad absurdum of the old-fashioned principle of reductio ad absurdum based on two-valued logic, and has thereby added millions, nay billions, of new meanings to the simplest words. And while the thought of this semantic tour de force is curling one's hair comes word of a discovery by Dr. A. T. Davis, of Northwestern University. With mathematical graphs, based on economic indices covering the past 780 years, Dr. Davis shows that the United States is uncomfortably close to another civil war, with a "riot stage" only 10 points away. One hardly knows what to do with this one except that he should be carefully watched, and his magic index number taken away from him before it blows up.

Though the epidemic is, of course, most widespread among the professors, the students themselves have not escaped infection, perhaps from classroom contact. In what seems to be a revolt against modern decadence and a return to barbarian simplicity, the students at the University of Minnesota are reported to be divesting themselves of shoes and possibly stockings at the college dances. The faculty is said to have objected on the somewhat paradoxical ground that such behavior is uncivilized . . . And so it goes.

Of course, this malaise of the higher learning, serious and distressing as it is, is not necessarily incurable. Indeed, a marked improvement has been noted lately even in such a chronic case as that of the mathematical philosopher, Prof. Bertrand Russell, who now eschews triangles as an insurance of wedded bliss. There may be some hope that the epidemic will pass.

A Mandate?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Lord Lothian is reported to have returned to ask for the extension of credit to Great Britain—the repeal of the Johnson Act—on the theory that the election gave President Roosevelt a mandate to guarantee an English victory by any means that will not, in President Roosevelt's opinion, directly involve us in war.

Did the election give the President such a broad mandate? The platform of the Democratic Party said in regard to aid to foreign nations: "We pledge to extend to these (liberty-loving peoples wantonly attacked) all the material aid at our command, consistent with law and not inconsistent with the interests of our own national defense."

Loans to England are not consistent with the law; both the Johnson Act and the Neutrality Act have prohibited them. Nor can the election be said to indicate a desire on the part of the American people to weaken our laws against involvement in foreign wars, since there was no such issue in the Presidential campaign. The leading noninterventionists in Congress were all reelected, many of them leading their tickets.

Both Presidential candidates strongly opposed involvement in foreign wars. Perhaps the only thing the election proved in the matter of foreign policy was that the electorate trusted President Roosevelt to guide the country safely along the hazardous course of "aid short of war." May this confidence be justified.

Neighborly Relations

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For quite a goodly number of months we have heard and we still hear the overworked phrase "establish good will with Latin-American Republics." We have used the term "Fifth Column" so much in connection with Latin-American countries that our Latin neighbors are wondering whether or not we are endeavoring to instill hatred for their German citizens, many of whom can be compared with our fine citizens of German extraction.

Sometimes I wonder what we are really doing about good will other than use words and lend our Latin neighbors money whenever the need may arise even though we are aware of the fact that it does both our country and theirs more harm than good.

It seems that we are continually making blunders in respect to establishing good relations. For example, the latest film regarding a Latin-American country is called "Down Argentine Way." For anyone acquainted at all with Argentina it is very unsuitable. It is more or less a burlesque. To make things worse Carmen Miranda, a Brazilian, not only has a part but she sings in Portuguese.

Many of us believe that if England wins, our troubles in South America will be over. However, let us bear in mind that England is a country like ours and needs an outlet for her products just as much as we do. Why not South America as the outlet?

"U. S. Of The World"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I suspect many ordinary folks, like me, have tried to arrive at some satisfactory conclusion regarding the great war now in progress, especially as it affects the United States. Due to the welter of propaganda assailing us, this is not easy; in fact, no one can give an entirely satisfactory answer to all the questions involved; or determine the part that we should play in their solution. No matter what the situation may be in which this country may find itself there will always be an alternative course of procedure that it may have been better to have taken.

I have stopped trying to solve these problems. I have swept aside all of the extraneous matter—which, I think, consists mostly of bunk anyway—and now restrict my considerations to certain fundamentals. As justification of our preparations for defense, I do not think of aggressor or of attacked nations; I do not think of the right of the British empire to survive, or of the justification for its dismemberment; I do not think of the atheism of one nation, and the respect for religion practiced by the other nation; I do not think of the conflicting ideologies, nor of the old and new economic orders. I think only of the interests of the United States, and of the menace of the avowed and potential enemies who may attack us.

If the totalitarian countries have any improved social or economic orders to submit to the world, in due time, we will accept all, or part of them, that we consider good for us. However no nation, or combination of nations can force their acceptance upon us.

While there may be many secondary reasons, the prime reason for our giving aid to Britain is the fact that we consider such action to be to our own best interests. This will be the determining consideration governing the future intensifications or diminution of this aid. Our aid to China, and to any other country, is, and will continue to be, similarly determined. "Our interests," of course, means our material interests. We may, and do, give aid for other reasons and purposes, but this does not materially affect our preparations for defense—except to the extent that good-will is built up in the countries aided.

The United States is not now just a large territory confined to the North American continent. We are in fact a vast empire composed of widely separated parts of which the 48 States of the Union comprise the heart. In addition our interests impose upon us the protection of the sovereignty of all the countries of North and South America. To try to restrict the area in which we would fight is, or would be, futile. We will fight anywhere, if and when it is to our interest to fight. We are powerful. We shall be vastly more powerful. Power does not beget humility. The elections are over. Let us abandon our attitude of provincialism. In our thinking let us substitute for United States of America the United States of the World.

For Ceasing To Recognize Germany

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The blustering autarch of Italy, in calling England the modern Carthage, reverses the truer analogy, and, by his cry of "Delenda est Carthago," prophesies the defeat of Germany.

That the battle of Flanders parallels the ancient duel at Cannae, in which Hannibal annihilated the Roman army, may be fairly deduced from Mussolini's rhodomontade. The British were expulsed from France as the Romans were from Spain. As a consequence of Hannibal's triumph, the neutrals of that time adhered to Carthage, quite as Hungary and Rumania today adhere to Germany.

However, the decision at Cannae was not definitive: the Fabian period of defensive preparation, by quick transition, was turned into the Scipionic offensive, which materialized when Rome's fleet was built, quite as the defensive war of England will be translated into an offensive when England's aerial arm permits.

The nations that by force, or by the menace of force, are coerced into the German-Italian camp, constitute the quicksands in which the dictator governments are erecting their edifice, a regime that cannot survive the quakes and floods that rise from the nature of peoples when responding to the imperative dictates of right and justice. As Carthage was vanquished in the battle of Zama, so Germany will be conquered in German territory.

Some elements of the peace of Zama may reasonably be adapted to the treaty that must be devised to end this war and to assure a durable peace to the continents. The Carthaginians were compelled to surrender in toto their navy and war material, and were bound not to engage in any future war except with the consent of Rome. By violating this last provision of the peace, in an African war, they precipitated the last Punic war, which ended in their complete obliteration, and Carthage vanished from the earth except as a name in history.

The nations that espoused German lawlessness may anticipate the sort of peace that must be the fate of Germany, whose only law is that of piracy; they no less must be disarmed, and war by them prohibited. They might justly be reduced to a state of probation for a quarter of a century, and be compelled, in the interests of peace, to establish parliamentary governments, to the end that no dictator might again disturb an earth devoted to right and law.

The fiction of American neutrality does not comport with our nation's history, and the legalistic pretense could best be abandoned. By specific provisions of the Constitution, Congress is empowered to define and punish acts of piracy. The opinion of the people appears to be that the existing German government is lawless and that its war is piracy. To be consistent, the United States ought to end its diplomatic relations with any such government, and to employ its naval force in the freeing of the oceans from piracy.

Sympathy could not avert defeat from a dispirited France, and public opinion does not intend that incongruous neutrality laws may continue to operate to the injury of the British commonwealth of nations. The United States would act in consonance with its traditions, rights and ideals by repealing the neutrality legislation, by proclaiming that the German government's lawlessness excludes it from American recognition, and by restoring our Mercantile Marine and protecting it with vessels of war, acts which would be commended by contemporary judgments and be applauded by historians of the future.

Little Boy Lost

YOU HADN'T MEANT to run away today. But you had been so sure it was Mummy, passing down the street in her white dress, with her parasol shielding her from the sun. And the front gate was unlatched.

"Mummy! Mummy!" you screamed, running pell mell to catch up with her, but when you turned the corner you were just in time to see her disappear on a street car. The car was clanging out of sight and there you were, standing alone and lost in the middle of the road, with a funny feeling inside as though you were going to be sick all over your new play suit.

Of course you weren't really lost because you knew the house was just two blocks around the corner, but you didn't want to go back there just now. Over near the end of the park you saw some little boys playing. One of them had a kite. When they saw you coming they stopped playing and stared at you solemnly, sucking their thumbs.

"I got a nickel," you offered hopefully. But they turned and ran away and you were left alone again. It made you feel empty inside. Besides, it was getting dark. Suddenly, all the street lamps went on—pop!—just like that. You discovered that if you squinted your eyes and looked at them through your eyelashes they looked glittery and spangly, like Christmas trees.

It made you think of Mummy.

You wished you could see her again. It was a long time since you had seen her. You remembered how she used to whisper secrets to you, her eyes laughing. It was a long time now since she had gone away.

Suddenly, you saw a street car come clanging around the corner again. It was going in the same direction Mummy had gone. Maybe if you got on it would take you to the place Daddy said she was staying. You clambered up the high step and dropped your nickel in the box.

There was a forest of legs about you. When the car lurched you caught hold of somebody's knees. A voice said, "Here, little man—rest your legs awhile," and you were hoisted on a seat. There was a little girl on the next seat. She was eating something from a striped paper bag. Her mouth was dirty with chocolate candy and she had on a red hair ribbon. "I'm five," she said, smiling at you. "How old are you?"

You told her you were going on five, but you were small for your age. The lady next to the little girl turned and said, "Why'n't you give the little fellow some candy, honey bun?" and when she held out the paper bag you took two chocolate drops politely. The little girl began to giggle. She put her arm about the lady's neck and snuggled there, smiling out at you and hiding her eyes behind her fingers.

Then the street car stopped and the little girl and her mother rose to get off. When they were gone you felt empty again. There weren't so many people on the car now. On it went, lurching and hurtling. Outside it was growing dark. You wished they would hurry, so you could see Mummy soon.

Then the car was stopping. You were just going to clamber from the seat when a big man in a blue uniform, with shiny buttons, came over to you.

"Well, Joe, for the luva Mike, will you looka this!" he called to another man in uniform.

"How did you get here?" he asked, staring down at you. "I thought you was one o' them women. What's your name, little boy? Lost, ain't you?"

You told them your name and that you were looking for Mummy, but they didn't seem to understand. The man called Joe, scratched his head. You tried to make it clearer.

"I want to go to Heaven," you said. "Is this the way to Heaven?" You tried to explain that that was where Daddy said Mummy was staying.

But the man was roaring with laughter. "Heaven!" he roared. "No, sir, boy! You're lost for sure!" He turned to the man named Joe. "Tell you what," he said. "We'll drop him by No. 10. If he's lost there'll sure be a call for him there. Come on, young fella!"

They hoisted you up to a seat in front near the conductor. You felt sick suddenly. The car had started going back now, lurching and hurtling again. Outside trees, houses, lamp posts whizzed by. It made you dizzy to see them going past so fast, like that. You flattened your nose against the car window. But after awhile you couldn't even see the trees. Outside it was black as ink. . . .

But you didn't cry. You didn't say anything at all. Your shoes stuck out straight before you. The toes were scuffed and muddy. You looked at them and tried to forget how hungry you were. . . .

Russia Again

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our friendly attitude toward the Soviets, in my judgment, is unwarranted. Russian brutality toward the brave Finns, her absorption of the defenseless Baltic states and her persecution of the Polish people is to be deplored. Were it not for the Soviets' deal with the Nazis, the western portions of Europe could not have been invaded so easily.

A few months ago Mr. Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, in no uncertain language censured the Soviets. Molotoff challenged his statement and had the audacity to brand us "misers." Ah—but that did not deter us from making a new trade agreement with the U. S. S. R.

In view of Mr. Knudsen's warning that our tools were of the utmost importance to break the bottleneck in the plane industry, one wonders why the Russians are securing such vital material from the United States.

Today And Tomorrow

War Or Measures Short Of War

A SOBER AND CANDID estimate of the situation must, it seems to me, lead to the conclusion that the issue in the months immediately before us is not whether as a matter of business or sentimental philanthropy or partial self-defense we shall sell or lend or give a little more or a little less assistance to Great Britain. The issue is not whether a little less assistance will "keep us out" of war or a little more assistance will "involve" us in the present war. The issue is whether before it is too late we can and will take the necessary measures to prevent the present war,—a war in which we are not called upon to fight,—from developing into a new and greater war in which we shall have to fight.

This is the real issue. But it is not being made plain to the people because the responsible and informed men who understand the situation are still silenced by the fairly large number of sincere but uninformed men who have never at any time in the past few years understood this war. At a time when only positive measures clearly and resolutely undertaken and backed by the utmost unified effort, can protect this Nation against involvement in an immense war, the Administration and the Congress and the Nation are paralyzed by the deadly error that if we help Great Britain a little she may win but that if we do not help her enough and she falls, then there will be peace, an unpleasant peace no doubt but nevertheless a peace.

The notion that the defeat of Britain would end the war and bring peace is now held by the very same people who have been telling us (1) that there would be no war, (2) that if there were a war, it would be waged against bolshevist Russia, (3) that when the war began, it was a phoney war, (4) that if it was not a phoney war, it would be a stalemate in which Hitler never took the offensive, (5) that when he took the offensive and defeated France, the defeat of Great Britain would follow in a few weeks, (6) that when he did not defeat Britain, he would in any event "unify" and "organize" the continent of Europe and so by undesirable means achieve a desirable end, (7) that even if he has failed to unify Europe, the war will come to an end if the British are defeated. This last illusion is complete, and as regards America more deadly, than all the illusions which preceded it in the series. For the certain truth is that the collapse of Britain, or even the defeat of Britain in one or more of the great theaters of the war, would be like the breaking of a dam which has been holding back a raging flood. The torrent of war would burst out upon all the oceans and into all the continents.

FOR THOUGH this is now a very serious war in Northern Europe, in the Eastern Mediterranean, and in China, it is still for Americans a localized and limited war. The Axis cannot get into Africa or Asia or into any part of this hemisphere and Japan is held back in the Pacific. The totalitarian Allies are held back by the resistance of the British and their Allies in Europe and the Near East, by the resistance of China and by the reserve power of the British, the Dutch and ourselves in the Pacific. They are held back, they are held down, in the grip of British sea power in Europe and the threat of American sea power in the Pacific. In this confined war we are not compelled to fight and as long as the war can be held within these limits, we may never have to fight. The thing which keeps us out of war is the power which keeps the war from expanding all over the world. The dam which restricts the war, and therefore enables us to arm without fighting, is a great fortified line—fortified by warships, airplanes, British and Allied land forces, the Chinese armies, the British, Dutch, and American power in the Pacific. This line runs around the world from the British Isles to Gibraltar to Suez to Singapore to Hawaii to Panama, and on the other side of it the Nazis, the Italian Fascists, and the Japanese expansionists are held back.

If this line is broken through at any vital point, the forces of the allied aggressor states will pour through the breach. There will be nothing to stop them at the point of the break-through or at any other point in the system of defense except the soil of continental United States and perhaps of the British Isles. Thus if the Axis can isolate the British Isles by blockade and bombardment, the British cannot hope to hold Gibraltar, Suez, any part of Northern Africa or the Middle East, or any position in the Far East. The road to South America will be wide open; the road to the Indies and Australia will be wide open. For with the forces we have the best we could hope to do would be to hold Hawaii and Panama, and that would be a desperate task because we would face a hostile and victorious and immensely powerful alliance in both oceans.

BUT EVEN if the British Isles hold fast, a break-through in the Mediterranean will at once extend the war dangerously into Africa—the South Atlantic, South America, and all over Southern Asia and the Pacific. For the British would then have to bring back all their forces from all over the world to resist a single-minded concentrated assault on the British Isles, and we should have to bring all our forces back for the immediate defense of Hawaii, Panama, Canada, and our nearest neighbors.

If there are no forces left to oppose the Japanese in the Pacific or the Germans and Italians in Africa and the South Atlantic, is it conceivable that with the richest empire ever opened to a conqueror before them, they will not seize the opportunity? Here they are fighting desperately to conquer relatively barren and already overcrowded territories in Europe and Asia, and yet there are men who tell us that if Asia, Africa, and South America were at their mercy, they would turn their backs upon these unbelievably great prizes of empire and would amuse themselves constructing a "united Europe." Self-deception and wishful thinking and intellectual inertia and the lack of a sense of reality cannot be carried further than to say that a war-like alliance which has conquered most of the world will renounce its conquests—that men who have overthrown the defenses of the existing order of the world will spend the rest of their days fitting Slovakia and Bulgaria carefully and precisely into a "new European order."

DURING THE CAMPAIGNS of the year 1941 it will be determined whether the war can be kept localized by the resistance of the British and their allies, the Chinese and ourselves, or whether the dam is to break and the war is then to overrun the rest of the world. The outcome of the campaign of 1941 will be determined not only by the power and valor of the British and the Chinese but by the lucidity and courage we are able to muster in the next few weeks and months. In the very immediate future we shall make the bed that we shall have to lie in for the very long future.

Our problem is how to use all the resources we now possess to make certain that the lines will hold fast through 1941; only thus can we be sure of the time needed to develop the armaments which will insure an Allied victory and our own security—they are the same thing—beginning in 1942. For if we are unable to insure an Allied victory beginning in 1942, we shall be confronted before 1942 with a wide extension of the war and our own isolation in a world where all the remaining great powers are allied against us. If the Allies hold through 1941, we can be strong enough in 1942 to insure their victory and our own complete security; if the Allies cannot hold through 1941, the arms we shall have in 1942 will not be sufficient for our own defense.

Therefore in 1941, it is our vital interest, and not a matter of business, sentiment, or charity, to insist that the lines hold and that the dam does not break. We have said that we shall take all measures "short of war;" the preservation of the line which now separates us from the existing war is, to anyone who looks at the substance and not at the words, the only way in which our involvement can remain short of war. When there is no longer a firm buffer between ourselves and the three allied aggressors, then our defense will no longer be by measures short of war but by actual and total war.

The criterion, therefore, of what is a measure short of war is not whether under the rules of international law, the measure is "an act of war." By that criterion the totalitarian states have already committed acts of war against us and we against them. They have broken their treaties, they have intervened by spies and agents in our affairs, they have trampled upon the rights of our citizens; we on our part have openly helped their enemies and have declared we shall help them even more. By any academic and theoretical test, everybody is already committing acts of war.

BUT THIS TEST has no meaning in the present situation. The question is not whether this measure or that is theoretically an "act of war" but whether it averts or does not avert bloody battles, the bombing of cities, invasion of this hemisphere or the sending of American troops overseas. That is what the American people mean when they hope to stay out of the war, and not whether a lawyer in the Nineteenth Century would have said that a measure was an act of war. Nor is the test whether Hitler or Mussolini or the Japanese say in their newspapers that a measure is an act of war; the test is whether the measure makes it more or less likely that they will be able to wage war against us and our vital interests. By this test every measure which makes it impossible for them to break through the dam and wage war is for us a measure short of war.

Therefore, it is only by taking promptly and resolutely all the measures which confine the war within the grip of British sea power, and therefore hold it off at a distance where no one can fight us, that we shall have done our whole duty in protecting the American people from war.

An Open Letter

To the Great White Father,
Big White House,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR PAW:

Since election a lot of people have been saying how they are sorry they said some of the things they said or, anyway, regret the way they said them, and we ought to close in now and prepare to defend the old home place against the you-knows who really hate the whole lot of us.

Now, I am not taking back anything I said any more than you are taking back anything you said, but you have had a lot of kids and in-laws, and you know how it is in a family when one member starts needling another and pretty soon they are all calling names and there is hell to pay. Like for instance, a man may say things to his own ever-loving when he is sore that if any other man was to say them to her he would belt him dead with a chair, or the old lady says things to the old man that she wouldn't let any other woman say.

These things just flare up in the best regulated families, but generally they burn out in no time. Some of the members may sulk a few days and refuse to help with the dishes or carry out the ashes, but if some yegg starts coming in the window they all rally 'round. After these scraps there is always a little spell of nasty-nice politeness while the members are trying to get back into the old way, and the worst thing anyone can do then is to say to another one, "yes, but did you mean it when you called me an ouse-lay?" Because that one is a sure thing to reply, "you bet your sweet life I meant it, you ouse-lay." And there you go again

Back years ago I knew a saloonkeeper who closed up the old store when prohibition hit and stacked about a thousand cases of nutritious prewar in his house, but presently the kids went off to college and then he made a couple of passes in the stock market, so he and the old lady moved into a swell country club to live, where they didn't have any room to store the provisions. So her sister was married and had a house in Jersey, so one night the sister said they could hide the goods in her attic, and they did.

And then the next Christmas they were all rejoicing at my friend's swell country club, and the sister's husband got comical and boosted my friend into the swimming pool, clothes and all, in his tux. Well, my friend crawled out and pasted the brother-in-law into the pool, and the next thing you know they were all in the water, yelling and squawking like a shipwreck.

For about ten years I guess after that they didn't speak, and my friend would drink that housepaint that they were selling for "McCoy" in those days, and he would spend many sad hours thinking about that beautiful pile of goods in his brother-in-law's attic and none of them on speaking terms. Until finally another Christmas they decided to get together again and let bygones go and say absolutely nothing about the events of that other Christmas night, such as who gave the first push and who called who what.

I tell you my friend was very happy when his brother-in-law put his arm around his shoulder about midnight and said, "Jimmy, you know I still have a lot of your old prewar merchandise in my attic," and James said, "well, well! I had forgotten all about that, and please forgive me for not taking it off your hands: so I will send over for it first thing tomorrow with a truck."

But just then from the other end of the table he hears his old lady in a scrap with her sister, and the sister was saying, "I beg your pardon: it was not my Mike that heaved your Jim into the drink first. That big drunk of yours started it. He heaved Mike in first."

In about two minutes there wasn't a whole window in the house, and the in-laws went off in a 16-passenger huff, and my friend never saw another drop of his supplies as long as he lived.

It gets you nowhere to keep on needling people when the riot is over and if you really want unity how about slipping the word to that Ickes of yours?

Because I have been very dignified and patient since election, but that mug won't let it die, and if he calls me "freckleface" just once more whatever happens is his fault, and there are 22 million frecklefaces in this country who won't take any more lip from him today than they would take before election, and what I said about him still goes.

The best of health and luck to you, paw. Affectionately,

GEORGE SPELVIN.

LORD BEAVERBROOK

Messrs. Alsop and Kintner discuss the "singular formlessness of organization" which prevents the American aircraft production program from reaching the intensity of the British effort under Beaverbrook

Capital Parade

By Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner

Vital Need: Coordination

THE SINGULAR formlessness of organization is what most strikes the serious investigator of the American air production program. British air production has been improved and maintained under desperately difficult conditions, by close coordination of the British air industry under the dynamic leadership of Lord Beaverbrook.

Yet the agencies in charge of American air production are far too closely coordinated themselves to attempt to coordinate the industry they are working with. And because of this loose organization, and of the failure to fix final authority and responsibility, real leadership is beyond the power of any individual, even of so commanding a figure as William S. Knudsen. The system is roughly as follows:

Authority and responsibility are primarily divided between the Army and Navy procurement divisions and the Defense Advisory Commission. Contrary to the general assumption, the Army and Navy procurement divisions still retain most of the initiative and power, deciding what shall be ordered, negotiating contracts, and checking on the contracts' execution. During the period when orders were being placed, the Defense Commission went beyond its advisory function and did much of the actual work. Now, however, the commission is more strictly limited to giving advice, especially as to methods for speeding up production.

THE DEFENSE COMMISSION also has certain special powers, such as its control of priorities. The Treasury enters the picture both as the mediator between British purchasers and the defense services, and as the judge of tax problems. The RFC has considerable power over the financing of plant expansions, and there are other, minor fingers in the pie.

Then within the industry, the air plants have been divided between the Army and Navy, Pratt and Whitney to the Navy, Curtiss-Wright to Army, and so on. Finally, in the Defense Commission, the only place where all these dispersed authorities might conceivably be headed up, there is no one to handle air production problems but Knudsen himself, two assistants and a minuscule staff.

SOME HINTS of the results of this situation are to be found in a series of odd items of information gathered in the various agencies involved.

Item 1: Since last May a small Western factory with 150 excellent machine tools has been advertising in aviation magazines, beseeching help from Knudsen's assistants, and canvassing air plant purchasing departments in order to obtain aviation subcontracts. Knudsen's assistants have tried to help. But like the British before them, most of our air plants have preferred to rely on their accustomed suppliers for additional orders. The regular suppliers, lacking the needed machine tools, have ordered new ones, creating a grave machine tool bottleneck. Meanwhile the small Midwestern plant has gone without work. In the opinion of at least one highly qualified expert, there are enough other small plants of the same sort to avoid a machine tool bottleneck if the British system of coordinating machine tool use is instituted.

Item 2: Production of one of the Navy's most important planes, the flying boat, was gravely delayed by a subcontract for wings entered into between Consolidated, which makes the flying boats in San Diego and Brewster in Newark. The finished wings had to be transported over a vast distance. Brewster also fell behind in its work. The management of Brewster was persuaded to seek aid from George Chapline, a production man brought in from Curtiss-Wright. But Reuben Fleet, the patriarchal head of Consolidated, fought the Navy bitterly during the straightening out of the subcontract, and is still conducting a determined rear-guard action against change of almost any sort. A typical incident was the prolonged, embittered debate which arose when the Navy asked Fleet to install a firesprinkler system to protect the crucially important unfinished planes in his plant.

Item 3: Fleet and other West Coast manufacturers some days ago sent frantic appeals to both Army and Navy, warning that they would be next on the list if the Vultee strike were successful. Yet one of the highest officials in charge of plane procurement confessed only yesterday that "no uniform policy in labor matters has been discussed" between the two departments.

SUCH ARE the inevitable penalties of the situation now prevailing. It has also had its bright side. For one thing, despite the complexities of their relationship, the Government agencies managed to use the period of comparative calm to work out an intelligent long term plan. For another, the men of the aviation industry have shown none of the stodginess which originally afflicted some of their British colleagues. They can boast a good many such achievements as Pratt and Whitney's increase from a monthly output of 100,000 horsepower of combat engines to 1,000,000 horsepower.

The trouble is, the Government's long term plan now being carried out by the industry calls for a production of only 1,800 planes a month by the middle of next summer, and 3,000 a month by April, 1942. And the war crisis, unfortunately, will not wait on long term plans. It will come in April, 1941, not April, 1942. The question thus arises whether a leading figure in the air industry—such a man as J. H. Kindelberger—should not be drafted into the Government, given full authority, and told to put air production on a real war footing.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

More Mark Twain!

"THE LARGEST BULK of unpublished material by any first-rate American author"—that, some years ago, was Bernard DeVoto's comment on the Mark Twain archives turned over to him for editing. The first volume to result from his study of this treasury is "Mark Twain in Eruption" (Harper's, $3.75), a selection of material left out of Mark Twain's autobiography as it was published in 1924.

Albert Bigelow Paine, who served as Mark Twain's official biographer and supervised the dictation and pasting together of the rambling materials which constitute the "Autobiography," used, Mr. DeVoto tells us, less than half of the original Mark Twain typescript. But, while Mr. DeVoto sometimes rebukes Mr. Paine's judgment and accuracy as an editor, this volume, which prints about half the half omitted—and explains the omission of the other quarter—does not justify the often expressed suspicion that the Mark Twain archives would some day yield new and important keys to Mark Twain's character. Here Mark Twain is a little more peppery than in previously printed works, and sometimes a little more unjust and ill-tempered. That is all.

Mr. DeVoto says that what his book adds to the portrait of Mark Twain is "the citizen of the first Roosevelt Administration looking toward our own time with a strong foreboding;" and he compares Mark's doubts of that early twentieth-century world with Henry Adams'. Aware that Paine's conscientious adherence to chronological order had made the "Autobiography" surprisingly dull, Mr. DeVoto has here pieced together the censored fragments in topical groupings. In the first of these Mark Twain appears as a bigoted Roosevelt-hater singularly like some of the more insane orators of our recent campaign. In 1908 Mark Twain was desperately serious in his conviction that the Republic was doomed. Dictatorship had arrived. We were in fact subject to a hereditary Republican party monarchy, from which there was no escape.

"Mr. Roosevelt has done what he could to destroy the industries of this country, and they all stand now in a half-wrecked condition and waiting in an ague to see what he will do next. One more shake and they will go" . . . (I repeat that this is Mark Twain, lying in bed and dictating furiously, in A. D. 1907, and the Roosevelt to whom he refers is Theodore.) Efforts to control the floods of the Mississippi he dubbed a "conspiracy" to win votes in the Mississippi Valley. He ranted against devaluation of the silver dollar. Roosevelt was insane, he shouted, and the country had to pay the costs . . . The only difference from 1940 campaign oratory is that Mark Twain was a better writer.

HE HATED Andrew Carnegie almost as much as Theodore Roosevelt, and he reports Carnegie's conversations about his meetings with kings and dukes, which must have sounded very much as Nicholas Murray Butler's books read. The fragments from Hannibal days, which, as Mr. DeVoto's introduction points out, inspired all the best of Mark Twain's writing, are slight. The bitter diatribes against various publishers are amusing. It was Mark Twain's view that "All publishers are Columbuses. The successful author is their America. The reflection that they—like Columbus—didn't discover what they expected to discover, doesn't trouble them. All they remember is that they discovered America; they forget that they started out to discover some patch or corner of India." There is a lot in that!

One poor little off-color anecdote sustains the swollen legend that Mark Twain was a frustrated bad man. Mr. DeVoto swears that he has here made no omissions in the interest of decency. Presumably in some other volume he will take up the history of Mark Twain's Elizabethan "1601" and of its "corollaries," of whose suppression he used to complain so eloquently, in the days when, instead of being the editor chosen by the Mark Twain estate, he was himself refused access to its treasures.

The spiciest "eruptions" of this book are merely some bits of vigorous gossip. Mark Twain thought Bret Harte a phony, and said so in far franker language than has hitherto been published.

Presidential Mood

By Mark Sullivan

Manner Likened To Tolerant Uncle

THAT DILIGENT BOSWELL to President Roosevelt, Journalist Ernest Lindley, wrote, about the middle of last month:

"The President's state of mind has improved greatly . . . He has become calmer, more relaxed, more tolerant of criticism, and generally more agreeable . . . A contributing factor may be that the President is seeing less than he did up to a few months ago of advisers who rejoiced in 'needling' him. His time is taken up chiefly with foreign affairs and National Defense. Most of his aides in these fields are indifferent to partisan squabbles and to the personal likes and dislikes which unfortunately have influenced the behavior of some of the President's New Deal lieutenants."

That was written some six weeks ago. The Presidential mood it described seems to continue. At Mr. Roosevelt's press conference this week, topics came up about which Mr. Roosevelt on other occasions might have bridled and become belligerent. But on this occasion he was full of sweet reasonableness.

An hour or so before the press conference, Mr. Roosevelt's Secretary of War, Mr. Henry L. Stimson, had spoken with strong condemnation of certain airplane manufacturers. These manufacturers, Mr. Stimson charged, continue to build commercial planes for private American transportation companies, when they should, in Mr. Stimson's judgment, be more diligent in filling war contracts for Britain and the United States. The newspaper men, having heard this from the Secretary of War, and knowing that the Secretary had just been in conference with the President, anticipated they might hear more of the same from Mr. Roosevelt. It was such an occasion as Mr. Roosevelt in the past would have accepted as opportunity for excoriation of economic royalists. But now, when one of the newspapermen asked the question designed to bring out the President's view, they got from him only patience and lofty reasonableness. He said he thought it was quite proper for the plane manufacturers to keep on supplying their private customers just as in the past. He merely thought that all the additional facilities they have set up lately ought to be devoted to war planes.

When the gentle, elderly Secretary Stimson is harsh about business, while Mr. Roosevelt is kind to it—that's news.

There was another question which, a year ago, almost certainly would have caused Mr. Roosevelt to respond with bellicosity and sarcasm. The question was about the controversy between Mr. Roosevelt's Attorney General, Mr. Robert H. Jackson, and Chairman Martin Dies, of the Congressional Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities. About this, Mr. Roosevelt was as far as possible from taking the side of his Cabinet member, or being otherwise contentious. His manner was that of an elderly and tolerant uncle taking kindly Olympian notice of a quarrel between two of the boys. He said that Mr. Dies has his Congressional function, which is investigation; and the executive department has its function, which is administration. There is need for both, and room for both, and no reason for collision. True, the line between the two is shadowy and creates possibility of misunderstanding. But he was quite sure the line can be defined; quite sure the matter can be fixed up. He is going to have a talk with Mr. Dies as soon as the latter returns to Washington; he will have a round table with Mr. Jackson and others of his Cabinet present; everything will be all right.

Mr. Roosevelt's manner of fairness and urbanity about Mr. Dies seemed completely natural. He seemed not to remember at all that in the past he had spoken slightingly of the Dies committee at press conferences, that members of his Cabinet jeered at the committee in public addresses; that the President's wife went far out of her way, took time and pains, to show what she could only have meant as contempt for the Dies committee. Perhaps Mr. Dies will forget, as successfully as Mr. Roosevelt seems to, that there was a time when it looked as if the Administration, and groups then favored by it, would have been pleased to see the Dies committee discredited out of existence.

There was another topic, about which Mr. Roosevelt once might have been pugnacious, but now seemed to have a kind of bored indifference. Someone told him the Senate had just passed the Walter-Logan bill, and asked whether he would veto it. He replied that he did not know, that he had not read the measure, that he supposed there would be plenty of time, because there would need to be conference between Senate and House to adjust differences in the two versions of the bill. The questioner said no, for a special reason, the conference would be unnecessary or brief. Again Mr. Roosevelt said, with tired lack of interest, that he had not read the bill, and didn't know what he would do about it.

It is a changed Presidential mood, sure enough. What caused it, and how permanent it may be—about that it is possible only to speculate. Something depends on whether that group mentioned by Boswell Lindley—the "advisers who rejoiced in 'needling'" Mr. Roosevelt—continue to see less of him.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Deserted Mill

The pond, a quiet onyx, on its breast
Reflects the sky, and trees that lightly hover
About its ferny banks. In the darkened mill,
Empty and dust-covered, silence waits,
A tangible presence, almost as if still
The miller filled the hops and loosed the gates—
Almost as if the next brief moment, sound
Would fill the expectant air, thick and unstirred.
Hovering in corners all around
The shadows seem to wait a sudden word,
But the spell is never broken. Quiet lingers;
Only the sun points long, exploring fingers.

Tribute to November

I

A mellow day in November
Is the most beautiful of all days;
It is like a woman who has grown old
With both grace and vigor,
Holding on to all the things that are vital,
Shed of the leaves of pretense and superficiality,
And gently diffusing a kindly tolerance

II

A quiet golden brown day in November
Is like a woman whose beauty is not lush and obvious,
But delicate, intagible, subtlefi
A connoisseur's treasure;
A woman whose charm has been drained of its dross of self-seeking
Ambition and envy; who with eyes on a nearing horizon,
Feels a warm reaching out toward all human creatures

III

A gentle, pungent day in November
Is like an older woman whose mind has the tang
Acquired by long sharpening and testing,
In the byways of thought:
Yet who also sheds a softening perspective
On creeds and opinions; and who before human frailties,
Tempers her strong west wind of thinking

IV

A mildly invigorating day in November
Is like a gallant woman who in very late autumn
Still looks unafraid toward the morrow,
With expectation and hope;
Who still dares to live boldly, adventurously
In realms of the spirit, and who holds up for our guiding,
The lamp of assurance, so we may know the trail that we fear
Lies smoothly ahead.

Hollywood, Calif.

Dipping into old fashioned beauty recipes is worth while, according to Miriam Hopkins, who picked up two new ones while reading the life of Mrs. Leslie Carter for her role as the famous actress in "Lady With Red Hair."

Mrs. Carter used to slap her cheeks gently with her hands for a natural bloom—Miriam finds this a perfect method for finding her own normal rouge line.

She kept gloves and handkerchiefs constantly perfumed in an air-tight cedar box sprayed weekly with her atomizer.

Pearls Should Suit the Wearer and the Occasion

For the woman with slender face and throat, a short triple row of pearls is best. The side ornament of red and silver relieves the regularity of the strands. Slender features are enhanced by wearing pearls to fill in a moderate neckline.

For evening, Hildegarde wears the $50,000 "Star of the South" necklace, one of the most valuable in the world. Single strands of pearls are most becoming to the woman of fine regular features. The simple dress provides background for the exquisite setting.

A long triple strand of pearls, as worn here, is best choice for the woman with a short neck and throat. These pearls not only soften the features but relieve the simple black dress. Through them a slenderizing regal effect is obtained.

Washington is a woman's town—also a pearl town. Probably more strands of pearls are worn here than in any other city because of the thousands of women who dress up daily and go out to lunch and cocktails, and the other thousands of career women who put on their best black dresses and their pearl necklaces to go on to tea parties after office hours.

Pearls are playing a big part in Christmas merchandise and make an acceptable gift for any woman. But they should be chosen wisely. Not only should the pearls suit the skin of the wearer but the length and type of the strand should be adapted to her proportions and the dress she is wearing. Above all, pearls should have the proper background, especially if they are unusually beautiful strands.

On this page are shown three of the most popular styles in pearl necklaces. They are modeled by Hildegarde, popular singer, with whom pearls are a favorite jewel and who frequently builds her wardrobe about them.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Song Writer Rejects Girl's Marriage Proposal, Whereupon She Persuades Her Dad to Coax Him; Boy Orders Dad Off Premises; Now What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A few years ago, while attending school in New York, I met a young song writer and fell deeply in love with him. Although he took me out often and seemed to care for me, the only time he mentioned "love" to me was when he sang me one of his songs.

Finally, one night, having grown tired of his rather cold attitude, I asked him to marry me. He said he would marry me if he could afford to—but that he didn't know where his next dime was coming from. The following day he left New York and returned to his home town to enter law school. He also left a note for me, which said that I should forget about him; that he would continue writing songs after getting his law degree.

I tried to forget him but found it impossible, so I spoke to my father about the matter and Dad agreed to speak to him. He went to this boy's home town and offered him a large sum of money, so that he could marry me and continue his law course, if he wished; or take me back to New York as his wife and go on with his song writing. The boy ordered my father out of his home and told him to buy a son-in-law elsewhere. Now, Dad is angry with me.

My problem is this: Should I have gone to see the boy myself? Was my father wrong in offering him financial assistance? Even though he was offended, do you think he is still in love with me? Is there anything I can do now to win him? JUNE.

Take Boy's Advice And 'Forget' Him

DEAR JUNE: It seems plain that the boy never has been in love with you. As I see the picture, he is appalled by the very suggestion of marriage to you. That's why he fled from New York the morning after you had proposed marriage, and ordered your father out of his home when your father went there in the capacity of bargaining agent for you. He was so scared by your respective overtures that he completely lost his poise (what little he has), on both occasions.

I believe it was his absolute panic which caused him to behave so boorishly toward your father—who, blundering badly with the best intentions in the world, deserved much more sympathetic treatment than he got. Had the boy's conscience been entirely clear—had he not been guiltily aware of having indirectly encouraged your bootless infatuation—he would have declined your father's crudely well-meaning offer in such a way that they could have parted friends, on a note of mutual understanding and good will.

If he hadn't been guilty of playing, rather knowingly and callously, upon your emotions, he would have said to your father, man-to-man fashion, something like this: "But I don't love June. We've been great friends. I think she's a swell girl. It's been a privilege to know her, and I realized along toward the last that she was beginning to think she was serious about me—which is why I ducked out. But I couldn't marry her. It wouldn't be fair to her. The kind of life I expect to lead isn't the life for a girl like June. I'm sure you'd understand that, sir. It more than a question of money. I know you want her to be happy, and I want her to be happy, too—but she'd never be happy with me. And besides—er—besides, marriage just isn't a part of my life plan. At least, I don't see it that way," etc., etc.

Under the circumstances, I think your father is warranted in being angry with both of you; but I think he should also be annoyed with himself, for letting his foolish fondness for you betray him into so awkward a lapse from good taste and good judgment. It's time both you and he faced the fact that "money isn't everything;" that it cannot buy heart's desire in every instance; that parents cannot and should not try to go out and corral the moon for their bleating children; and that, as the homely phrase goes, "every tub must stand on its own bottom."

I think your "song writer" is a rather second-rate character, and I base my conclusion on his performance throughout; for having misled you, in the first place; for having "run out" on the ticklish situation he had created, in the second place; and for having lashed your muddleheaded father with outraged scorn, in the third place. Obviously your Dad wasn't trying to "buy" him. He thought, poor old fellow, that he was helping the boy up to the pie-counter of happiness.

Did your father "do wrong in offering financial assistance?" According to his lights—no. His motive was good; so I think he deserves charitable judgment. Should you have gone to see the boy yourself? The outcome wouldn't have been any different. The boy might have used slightly different tactics with you, but you, too, would have been sent away empty-handed. There isn't a ghost of a chance of your "winning" him—so you may as well take his own piece of advice and "forget him." M. H.

Tailored Rooms In Warm Tones Appeal to Men

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

In this tailored and streamlined age, it may be a perfectly reasonable release to go in for the rather fussy, tufted pin cushion type of decoration that has been turning up in fashionable places these recent seasons. On the other hand, maybe all that is out of step, as many designers maintain . . . maybe our backgrounds should be smooth and practical and wonderfully simple.

Well, luckily there's no law about it. We "pays our money and we takes our choice." The ads are replete with alluring offerings of both types of furniture.

The pleasantest of tailored rooms we've seen—a room the men would approve at a glance—was none the less exciting decoratively because it was so thoroughly functional. Walls of a deep ripe red gave a fine warmth and glow to the scene, with a rug of the same tone. Curtains of red and white striped cotton and lamps with light wood bases and white shades were interesting for contrast. But it was the pale pine furniture in waxed finish that gave the room its most important lift. This included a bridge ensemble, a large breakfront type of modern cabinet, unit book shelves flanking a pine mantel, incidental blond tables and chairs.

Upholstery in the red and white stripe and in a textural beige was pleasant, so were Audubon prints framed in pale wood and a collection of duck decoys.

Another room that would appeal to tailored tastes used honey colored maple furniture against honey-colored walls with a carpet of this same tone. Upholstery in smoke blue and in amber made an informally sophisticated accent. While accessories of amber glass and copper, reproductions of modern paintings, and curtains of gold ninon were scintillating details.

A Woman's WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

FOR residents of America's No. 1 tourist city, Washingtonians are dismally ignorant about the history and landmarks of their home town. When they take Aunt Matty sightseeing, the trip consists usually of a sketchy tour of the Capitol, the White House and the Monument and is pretty dull for all concerned. You could brighten the jaunt for Aunt Matty and yourself too if you'd put in a little groundwork in the Public Library's Washingtoniana division.

Miss Ethel Lacy, the enthusiastic librarian in charge, will show you maps of the city as it looked 'way back when Florida Avenue was Boundary Street. It used to surround the town, she'll explain; hence its semi-circular meandering. There are city directories dating back to 1822, descriptions of F Street as it looked a century ago, even titles like "Murder in the State Department" and "The Corpse on the White House Lawn." Speaking of the White House, there's little you can't learn about it by leafing through Miss Lacy's current-clippings file. "Apparitions," "children," "china," cranks," "egg rolling" are but a few of the headings. And newspaperwomen who say they have trouble keeping up with Mrs. Roosevelt have nothing on Miss Lacy; "My Day" itself entails a whole series of scrapbooks of its own.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY—During a recent National Farm and Home broadcast, announcement was made of a Government bulletin on housefly control. The response was enormous, but of the thousands of postcards which poured in, the majority requested "that bulletin on housewife control" . . . Local advocates of Henry George's single tax theory like to refer to their cause as the "Georgist movement." As one woman puts it: "People are funny. They sometimes think a single tax is a levy on bachelors."

Members of the A. A. U. W. believe the office staff of their clubhouse is as efficient as is to be found in Washington. Here are some of the tricks, according to Manager Margaret Lund: The girls watch people entering and leaving the building so they can answer telephone calls with a helpful, "She left about five minutes ago," or "She's gone up to the dining room; I'll connect you." They learn the schedules of the maids and can locate them quickly at a guest's request. By associating names and faces, they have become familiar with the club's 60 employes and many of its 800 members. They pride themselves on being able to guide out-of-town visitors to the best movie in town or to the Franciscan Monastry.

'Lacquered Beauties' Going Out

By Ida Jean Kain

WELL, who'd have thought it! The public fancy is now turning up its nose at glamour! It's applause is reserved for "the real American girl"—who wears slacks with grace and evening gowns with sophistication, but who prefers outdoor sports to the night spots.

Our authority for this about-face on the part of the public is Harry Conover, who supplies models to the popular magazines and advertising agencies and whose business it is to know these things. He says flatly that "the lacquered look" that goes with glamour is not what it takes to sell the advertisers' products. The consumers favor the sun-kissed beauties.

It seems the modeling business is essentially a polishing school where a girl "learns to make the most of what she has." One of the first things she learns is that personality may account for as much as 65 per cent of her looks! And she meets so many people in the course of her work that she soon forgets to be shy and can be her own charming self.

The Ideal Model

Of course she makes the most of her looks, too. And that means, primarily, that she must have a sparkling vitality and a figure that is as streamlined as a movie star's. Here is a set of measurements our exacting connoisseur considers ideal for a fashion model: Height, above 5 feet 8 inches in high heels; weight, in the close neighborhood of 125 pounds; waist, 25 inches; bust, 35 inches, and hips, the same as bust!

Imagine a job that requires such streamlined specifications. The average girl would have to do quite a lot of work to have a model figure—and, to give away a secret, so do most of the beginning models.

Hold Sports Records

"Practically every new girl has to take from one to two inches off the hipline," Mr. Conover says. His advice is "to sit on the floor and roll violently from side to side—until it hurts." That's the daily routine these beauties find most effective for hip-slimming.

It's amazing how many of these girls hold records in sports. They love to ski, skate, swim, play tennis or badminton, or ride, so their favorite recreation affords plenty of outdoor exercise. It's a very practical idea to learn to play for your exercise—you're more likely to take it!

Girl Scout Leaders Hear Dr. Bowman

Educator Urges Clear Thinking As Supplement To Action

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Young people should be led to supplement action with clear thinking, Girl Scout leaders were told last night by Dr. LeRoy Bowman, noted educator and authority on group work.

Dr. Bowman, as guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the leaders and officials of the District Girl Scouts and guests from other similar organizations, held at the Y. W. C. A., discussed "The Leader's Attitude During the Present Situation."

At such a time as this, when the entire emphasis for adults is placed on the necessity for quick, decisive action to accomplish the utmost in the national defense program, young people should be led to think, said Dr. Bowman. He stressed the importance of young people being bulwarked with a democratic concept of authority as distinct from the totalitarian concept. They should be shown the difference between authority arbitrarily imposed and that which a free people gladly recognize as an instrument for order and the attainment of a desired end, he said.

Dr. Bowman urged that leaders work to build up in young people the qualities of loyalty and respect for authority at the same time that they are taught the value of individual initiative. They should not submerge their individuality in blind group action, he said.

In a time when animosities and bellicose attitudes are rampant, it is also essential that leaders of group agencies stress human values and more than ever emphasize tolerance, said Dr. Bowman. Young people should understand what principles the democratic nations are fighting to preserve, he said, and at the same time, should be encouraged in a spirit of tolerance, especially toward the refugees from the war areas.

Dr. Bowman, who is serving as secretary of the Cooperative Housing Federation in New York, is former director of the United Parents' Association of New York City, where he trained leaders of 90 discussion groups within the association.

Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn, third vice president of the National Girl Scout organization, has accepted the chairmanship of the newly organized D. C. Girl Scout Service Bureau. Serving as members of her committee are Mrs. H. C. Deason, Mrs. Randall Stone, Mrs. R. C. Breckinridge, Mrs. Ronald MacDonald and Mrs. G. Wilkinson.

The Service Bureau is one of many similar ones organized in the country as the contribution of Girl Scouting toward meeting the national emergency.

Emphasis will be placed on community service activities by the local Service Bureau. Requests for aid are coming into the Girl Scout Service Bureau at 1825 M Street Northwest, from agencies belonging to the Council of Social Agencies. Included are requests for clerical help in assembling, folding, and stamping mail, entertainment of children, instruction in folk dancing, arts and crafts at various orphanage homes, collecting and reconditioning clothes for underprivileged and refugee children, sewing and knitting, making layettes, helping with accounts in religious institutions and many other tasks.

In addition to these requests, the Girl Scouts serve the Community Chest, the Tuberculosis Association, the Red Cross, various citizens associations and parent-teacher organizations as the need arises. At present they are making stuffed toys and dressing dolls which will be placed on exhibit at the Council of Social Agencies Workshop on December 16, to be sent later on to Children's Hospital.

McNeese Lecture Today

Mrs. O. W. McNeese will discuss "Our Newly Leased Naval Bases" in her lecture at the Sulgrave Club this morning. The books to be reviewed are "The Beloved Returns," by Thomas Mann, and "The Vanishing Virginian," by Rebecca Yancey Williams. The lecture will begin at 11:30.

YESTERDAY the Columbian Women of George Washington University closed their campaign for scholarship funds for the institution with a "report tea" at which Mrs. Watson W. Eldridge was hostess at Staff House No. 6, of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Under the leadership of Miss Sara Lerch and Mrs. Eldridge, various teams have worked actively during the past month, giving parties and carrying through projects of different kinds to raise money.

Their activities were reported yesterday with Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, wife of the president of the university; Miss Margaret Pepper, president of the Columbia Women, and other officers, present to hear of them. Miss Harriett E. Garrells is chairman of the scholarship committee.

Final returns will be reported next Tuesday night when the Columbian Women will dedicate the reserve reading room in the new library, for which they raised a fund of $10,000. Following the ceremony, Dr. and Mrs. Marvin will entertain at a reception in the library.

LUNCHEON MEETING — The drama section of the Twentieth Century Club, of which Mrs. Walter E. Hilton is chairman, will have its luncheon meeting today instead of Friday as had been previously announced. Luncheon at 12:45 at the Y. W. C. A. will be followed by a business meeting at 1:30 and then by the presentation of "Bringing Up Sadie," under the direction of Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin and Mrs. D. Agnew Greenlees. Mrs. Edwin H. Etz is in charge of reservations.

EDUCATION MEETING — Tomorrow noon the department of Government and education of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters will have a luncheon meeting at Taft Inn, 1603 K Street, devoted to adult education.

Mrs. Ola D. Rush, supervisor of home economics in the District schools, will discuss "Adult Home-Making Education"; W. H. Morris, director of adult education for the WPA, and Miss Maude Alton, head of the Americanization School, will tell of the work in adult education being carried on under them.

Mrs. William H. Savin, temporary chairman of the education department of the District league, will preside.

TWO DEPARTMENTS MEET—Scrapbooks were made yesterday at the meeting of the welfare department of the Silver Spring Woman's Club at the home of Mrs. James E. Pope, 8606 Dale Drive. The welfare group had its meeting in the morning. In the afternoon at 1:30 the garden department met with Mrs. Harry Falk, 1108 Glen Ross Road, and heard talks by Mrs. Richard Palmer and Mrs. Charles Kreuger on "Mistletoe and Holly."

DISCUSS POLL TAX—The educational class of the Woman's National Democratic Club will meet this morning at 11 o'clock at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire Avenue, for a discussion, pro and con, on retaining the poll tax in States where such a tax is required for the privilege of voting.

ART EXHIBIT OPEN—The District Branch of the National League of American Pen Women will open to the public the current art exhibition on the walls of its studio in the Grafton Hotel today, tomorrow and Friday. Mrs. George Gaydash, art chairman, is in charge.

Among the interesting pictures in the show is one called "A Japanese Arrangement," painted in Honolulu by Angie Weaver Wright and used on the cover of the spring issue of the magazine Ohio Woman. Mrs. Wright, who has recently transferred her membership from the Honolulu to the District Branch of the League, is also showing two scenes done on the beach at Waikiki.

Mildred Ruttencutter has in the exhibition a scene of the Grand Canal in Venice and another of the Tower of Piazza San Marco, both painted last season in Italy. Two colorful Mexican pictures, done by Eugenia DeLand Saugstad on a recent trip to Mexico, are "Young Vendor in Acapulco" and "He Lost at the Cock Fight."

PRESENT NEW PLAY—Dorothy Ann Rutherford, young daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Harry K. Rutherford, is author of "The Great 'Man' Catherine," to be presented tonight and tomorrow at the Art Club under the direction of Denis Connell.

It is an unusual play, based on Catherine the Great of Russia. Maud Howell Smith plays Catherine, Charles Grunwell, King Ivan. The other principals are William Denton and Harold Long. Hugo Inden has done the set, and the costumes are by Cary Mayor and Mary Pearson, of the Halstead Studio.

Soroptimists Hear Burrus

The importance of truth in advertising was discussed by George B. Burrus, president of the Advertising Club, yesterday in an address to the Soroptomist Club at its regular meeting.

Advertising, said Mr. Burrus, must be "good all the way through" in order to win attention and confidence, with truth the cornerstone on which all effective advertising must be built. He contrasted the truthful advertising of today with that of 50 years ago, when any kind of extravagant claim could be made for a product without a challenge.

Miss Mary Bourke, president of the club, presided and Mrs. Marguerite Shondau, secretary to the president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was presented as vocal soloist, with Mrs. Jewell Downs at the piano.

Camp Fire Girls To Exhibit Photos Taken in Contest

Camp Fire Girls in Washington, Bethesda and nearby Virginia are participating in a local photography contest, the purpose of which is to highlight the privileges Americans enjoy which too often are taken for granted. The Camp Fire organization believes that pictures can tell the story effectively.

There will be an exhibit of the winning pictures at 822 Fourteenth Street Northwest from December 9 to December 15. John Stewart, will serve on the local committee of awards with Mrs. Howard H. Oldham, an artist, of Arlington, and Arthur Ellis, staff photographer of The Post.

The two classes into which entries will be divided—outdoor and indoor—offer opportunities for Camp Fire Girl photographers to tell why they are glad to be growing up in America. Eighteen awards will be made in the Potomac area, including silver trophies and prizes which have been donated by interested individuals and photograph supply houses. Winning pictures will be sent to New York and entered in American Close-Up, the National Camp Fire contest.

Parties to Take on Less Purposeful Manner

Accent From Now Till After Christmas To Be on Entertaining With No Strings Attached and Fewer Benefits

By Hope Ridings Miller

WHILE BENEFITS for Britain thus far have keynoted most large-scale entertaining and have taken over virtually all the spotlight not reserved for debutantes, we can expect something different the remainder of the year. The deb whirl will continue until January, of course, but a glimpse of the forthcoming calendar indicates that so far as other fetes are concerned, the accent from now until after Christmas will be on less purposeful partying.

Hope Ridings Miller

In other words, many a Capital hostess now weary of good works has decided to break down and entertain with no strings attached. Invitations for countless fetes that will enliven the December round already are in the mails, and more will be along presently. It looks as if the town will take on new life in the next few weeks, and that a calendar top-heavy with benefits the past month will be a lot gayer from now until the end of the year, at least—and maybe longer.

Many parties drawing Capitalites will swirl around the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia on Saturday. Most Washingtonians going over to see the sports classic will stay through the week-end. A few, however, will head homeward directly after the game. The latter is the plan of Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Mrs. Stimson, who will have a number of friends with them; and of Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox who also will entertain a large party at the game.

Meanwhile, a number of Washingtonians already are out of town to visit friends and relatives who will celebrate Thanksgiving today. The Solicitor General and Mrs. Francis Biddle are spending a few days in Boston with their son, Randolph, who is a student at Harvard. They will return to Washington on Monday.

Chinese Envoy at Town Hall Tonight

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith will go to Philadelphia today to have Thanksgiving turkey with relatives and then will fly from there to New York in the late afternoon. Tonight they will be in the audience when the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, talks at Town Hall. Later, they will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Patterson, at a dinner given at the Town Hall Club. The Smiths will be back in Washington on Friday in time to attend the dinner Miss Bertha Noyes is giving that evening.

With some of the outstanding buds in this year's crop scheduled to bow to society in the next three days, the younger set will go into high gear for the remainder of the week and will continue at top speed through Monday night. That's when several Washington debutantes will be presented at the Baltimore Bachelors' Cotillon.

Among the girls slated for curtseying at that ancient and honorable institution are Miss Kitty Hill, daughter of Mrs. Hiram Bingham, who will bow under the aegis of her father, Gen. John Phillips Hill; Miss Margaret Carey Tuckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman; Miss Georgianna Flather, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Flather, jr., and Miss Patsy McKnew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald H. McKnew.

Mariana Evans Home From College

Still others who will be Bachelors' Cotillon belles are Miss Mariana Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., who returned home from Simmons College last night; Miss Catherine Clement, daughter of Mrs. Donald Bingham, who will come from Bryn Mawr College on Monday to attend the fete; Miss Elaine Darlington, daughter of Mrs. George Angus Garrett, who will be presented by Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward Johnson; Miss Lucy Marbury, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Marbury, who will fly home from Antioch College; Miss Elizabeth Stewart-Richardson, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. R. M. Stewart-Richardson; Miss Mary-Stuart Montague Price, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Allen Ingram Price and Miss Anne Ogle Shivers, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leetch, of Georgetown.

CAPITAL CALENDAR: Assistant Secretary of State Henry F. Grady, and Max Truitt, of the Maritime Commission, who are American delegates to the current Inter-American Maritime Conference, will entertain at a dinner at the Mayflower tomorrow night for other members of the conference. Guests will include officials of the Pan American Union and a number of State Department officials, who are serving on conference committee . . . Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Culbertson will entertain at dinner Saturday night . . . Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Diggs are planning a buffet supper for Satday evening . . . Mrs. Emerson Howe has cards out for a tea Saturday afternoon in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue . . . Mr. and Mrs. Hary Hawkins will entertain at dinner tomorrow night . . . And Mr. and Mrs. John McClure will give a similar fete on December 6 before the season's first meeting of the Friday Evening Dancing Club at the Willard Hotel.

Miss Mathews is the granddaughter of Mrs. Churchill Candee, of Washington, and the pretty Vom Rath twins, who look exactly alike, are making their home in Washington this winter. They also come from New York.

The Watsons have the house on Massachusetts Avenue which Maj. and Mrs. David Barry formerly occupied. The hostess and her three attractive honor guests received in front of the fireplace in the upstairs hall. Mrs. Watson wore a floor-length frock of lipstick red with ermine tails trimming the neck. Miss Mathews was in black with an embroidered sash and Miss Marie Vom Rath had chosen a flame-colored frock. Her sister was in black. All topped off their frocks with corsages of camelias.

Mrs. Doeg Among Guests

Mrs. Scudder Doeg, just recovered from an illness, was being welcomed back into circulation again. Another guest who has been absent for quite a while was Winant Johnston, recently returned to this country from France. He was in charge of establishing a museum at Dinard when the war forced him to come home, leaving most of his belongings behind.

One of the smartest outfits seen was Miss Zeva Fish's black dress topped with a bright red wool jacket, and a matching posy in her hair. Others glimpsed included Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Miss Carolyn Nash, Miss Laura Tuckerman and Miss Eleanor Meem.

About the Town

DUDLEY HARMON

MR. AND MRS. John Carter Vincent and their two children are back in Washington again after a motor trip across France to Lisbon, which Mrs. Vincent describes as having been made in conditions just about like those in the Middle Ages.

Mr. Vincent has been consul at Geneva, where the family lived with a machine gun in their garden. His wife and tiny son and daughter have had two experiences traveling from there to Lisbon in the last few months. Early last summer, as a fugee who finally had to turn back, his wife kept finding herself in smart resorts like Aix les Bains, Biarritz and St. Jean de Luz, housed in dusty casinos with her travel-stained children and surrounded by escaping members of the international set. She was trying to get to Bordeaux for the last trip of the liner Washington, but missed her boat. She proceeded to Lisbon, where Mr. Vincent motored to get his family and take them back to Geneva.

THEIR SECOND trip to Lisbon, made just a few weeks ago, was again across France in their car. Special racks were built onto the auto for gas, which can't be taken out of Switzerland without a permit. As it is almost impossible to obtain petrol in France, they had to carry a supply to last them until they reached Spain. There they retanked, paying a dollar a gallon.

Food conditions are equally frightful, especially in Spain, reports Mrs. Vincent sadly. The children left Switzerland with rosy cheeks, but by the time they reached America, looked faded, says their mother.

The Vincents came back on the Excalibur under the inevitable conditions of overcrowding. Cots were set up in the lounge, which was nicknamed the concentration camp. Among their fellow passengers was Fred Hunt, just back in Washington after several years of consular service in Europe.

Several weeks ago Mr. Vincent was named to another danger zone, Shanghai, as consul. For the moment the family is staying in the home of Maxine Davis in Georgetown. They lived in Washington for several years until Mr. Vincent was ordered to Geneva.

THE MANY newcomers to Washington this year include Mr. and Mrs. Macgill James. He is assistant director of the Mellon Gallery, which is supposed to be opened in March or April. (The outside is completed, but the pictures have yet to be assembled.)

Before coming here, Mr. James was director of the Peale Museum in Baltimore. That institution is devoted to the works of the early American painter, Charles Peale, who lived in Baltimore for many years. Mr. James was in the last World War (he illustrated a book his battery got out on their experiences) and then entered his father's lumber business. But he soon decided that art was far more congenial.

Besides doing clever pen and ink sketches, Mr. James collects books. He and his wife, who is a daughter of the well-known Baltimore rector, the Rev. Arthur Kinsolving, have taken a house in Georgetown.

ODDS AND ENDS: Marquis Childs is, I hear, in the throes of writing another novel about the Capital. His first was called "Washington Calling" . . . Mrs. Henry Leonard is back again at her Georgetown home after several months at her ranch in Colorado. Maj. Leonard will join her here tomorrow, and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Francis MacVeagh, of Cambridge, have been visiting her. They left earlier in the week.

Furs Luxurious, flattering, practical . . . the perfect combination for a really important gift, and what a choice from the sable dyed muskrat to the delicate white ermine, from the shining beaver to the aristocrat of them all, mink. At almost any price you wish to pay.

Fur Salon, Second Floor

Mrs. Randle Gets Divorce

CHARGES CRUELTY—Mrs. Lillian Arliser Dixon Randle, Virginia and Maryland horsewoman, was granted a divorce in Reno yesterday from her sportsman husband, Ulmo Shannon Randle (inset), Washington real estate operator. The Randles' marital difficulties first became public in June, 1939, when he filed a memorandum of divorce in Fairfax County. This action was subsequently dropped. In her suit, Mrs. Randle charged cruelty, the Associated Press reported. She and her two sons, U. S., jr., 4, and David, 3, now reside in a Washington apartment

Experts Study Priority Problem In Plane Industry

By the United Press

The Priorities Board yesterday discussed with the Defense Advisory Commission the extent to which military aircraft needs should take precedence over production for commercial airlines, but withheld any policy statement until it canvasses the situation with President Roosevelt today.

The problem was brought to the fore Tuesday when Secretary of War Stimson charged that the aircraft production industry was providing planes for commercial lines while behind schedule on delivery of Army planes. He urged that definite limitations be placed on the number of new planes turned over to commercial lines. President Roosevelt subsequently asserted it was obvious that military needs should take precedence over commercial needs.

It is understood that the Priorities Board discussed, in its meeting yesterday, Stimson's proposal that commercial airlines not be permitted to expand beyond their present schedules.

Mrs. Stoddard, D. C. Hostess, Musician, Dies

Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, wife of the author, died yesterday at her home, 2311 P Street, Georgetown, after an illness of several months.

STODDARD

One of Washington's prominent hostesses and an outstanding member of music circles, Mrs. Stoddard was the former Elizbeth Guilford Bates, daughter of Frederick B. Bates, of Boston, and the late Mrs. Bates, who before her marriage was Miss Georgia Forree, member of a prominent Southern family.

Mrs. Stoddard was born in Boston 48 years ago. Early in life she began studying music under her aunt, Mrs. Ellis Bates Rice, a noted New England singer and teacher. Later she studied with Sir Henry Wood in London and in New York. As a young woman, she was recognized as having an outstanding contralto voice, and she did much concert work. She also was an accomplished pianist and had a wide friendship among musicians both in America and abroad.

In 1926 she became the bride of Lothrop Stoddard, the wedding taking place in Boston. For a number of years, Mr. and Mrs. Stoddard had made their home in Washington, where they had been prominent in social, musical and literary circles.

Last winter, while Mr. Stoddard was in central Europe collecting material for his book, "Into the Darkness," published in the spring, his wife stayed in Washington and taught music at Holton-Arms School. She also had a number of private pupils.

Mrs. Stoddard's body has been cremated, and the ashes will be buried later at West Dennis, Mass., where the Stoddards have had a summer home for many years. Mrs. Stoddard leaves her father; her husband, a son, Theodore Lothrop Stoddard, jr., 14, and a daughter, Mary Alice Stoddard, 12.

Glass Patent Pacts to Be Voided

By the Associated Press

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 27.—The glass container industry agreed today to dissolve patent agreements which Government antitrust prosecutors contended were monopolistic.

Attorneys for major companies then went to work on plans for an organization, tentatively named the Glass Institute, which would license all companies desiring to enter the field.

Samuel S. Isseks, of Washington, special assistant to the Attorney General, contended that Hartford-Empire Co., a Connecticut holding company, controlled most of the Nation's glass container production, and that new companies were prevented from entering the field.

Under the agreement announced as the antitrust case was about to go to trial today in Federal Court, present licensees of basic patents would buy assets of Hartford-Empire Co. for about $15,500,000 and transform it into a Glass Institute.

The institute would hold the basic patents acquired from Hartford-Empire and keep them available to new manufacturers at the same cost paid by organization members.

One of several details still being worked out, attorneys said, is the problem of reimbursing licensees for the $15,500,000. Another problem is an agreement between Hartford-Empire and Hazel Atlas Co., of Wheeling, W. Va., by which the holding company pays a percentage of its income to Hazel Atlas. The agreement grew out of patent infringement suits and has several years to run.

The "free licensing" agreement ended the largest and sole remaining point in the Government's monopoly suit against 13 corporations and 103 officers, Isseks said.

Although attorneys for all defendant corporations agreed to "free licensing," all said they reserved the legal right not to enter the proposed institute. Actually, however, only one indicated it might not enter, and Isseks declared the suit would be brought to trial unless a majority of major manufacturers do enter.

Michigan G. O. P. Leader Indicted

Frank D. McKay, 14 Others Accused Of Mail Fraud

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 27.—A special Federal Grand Jury which has been investigating Michigan's State government for the past eight months returned its first indictments today, bringing mail fraud charges against Frank D. McKay, of Grand Rapids, Republican national committeeman, and 14 others.

The indictments, returned before United States District Judge Arthur F. Lederle, levelled a double-barreled accusation at McKay, a former State treasurer.

First, the grand jury charged, McKay and his associates, including 11 of the defendants, capitalized upon his political prestige in order to "shake down" distillers hoping to do business with the State liquor monopoly. The shakedown, said the jury, amounted to more than $500,000.

Second, the jury continued, McKay collected $9,918 from Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., in the name of the Republican State Central Committee to meet a campaign "deficit" which McKay "well knew" no longer existed.

The indictment charging McKay with shaking down distillers named Republicans and Democrats as front men and go-betweens. The defendants included Fred C. Ehrmann, secretary of the State liquor control commission and a Republican appointee; John H. Marlof, a close associate of the late Isaiah Leebove, "mystery man" of State politics in the administration of former Gov. William A. Comstock, a Democrat, and William H. McKeighan, an associate of McKay in Republican factional feuds and who was Mayor of Flint for five terms.

A third indictment charged a State purchasing agent and two suppliers with faking and altering bids in order to favor certain firms providing State institutions with hardware and clothing.

The liquor indictment alone contained eight counts, each carrying a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $1,000 fine. If convicted on all counts of that indictment, McKay would be liable to a maximu mof 40 years in prison, although the term would be discretionary with the sentencing judge.

Contract Bridge

You, East, are declarer. Your four-spade bid has been doubled by South, whose opening lead was the king of hearts; it holds and he shifts to the three of diamonds. Although there are three aces, one king and two queens against you, the hand can be made. Plan your play carefully.

♠ 10 6 3 ♡ 10 4 3 ◇ J 10 6 ♣ K 9 6 4	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ K Q J 9 8 5 2 ♡ 9 5 ◇ A K Q 9 ♣ None

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♣	4 ♠
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♡.

After the diamond shift, declarer sees that the defenders are looking for a diamond ruff. Taking the diamond in dummy with the jack, he plays the king of clubs up to the hand that had bid the suit, discarding his losing heart on the trick. South returns a heart but declarer ruffs, knocks out the ace of trumps, regains the lead on the next trick and runs his high diamonds after first drawing trumps. He makes his game, losing a heart, a club and a diamond.

If declarer had played trumps on the third trick, instead of the king of clubs, South would have taken with the ace, put North in with the ace of hearts, and ruffed partner's diamond lead. Declarer would have gone down one, losing two hearts, a spade and a diamond ruff.

Murray Steps Into Aluminum Strike Picture

Confers With Union Head on Walkout At New Kensington

Pittsburgh, Nov. 27 (AP).—C. I. O. Chieftain Philip Murray stepped into the six-day old strike involving 7,500 workers in the New Kensington plant of the Aluminum Co. of America tonight, conferring at length with Nick A. Zonarich, president of the Aluminum Workers Union.

The meeting was described by an associate of the union leader as one in which he could obtain first-hand information about the walkout, which developed, Zonarich said, because a union officer requesting $12 dues from a worker had been threatened.

The Aluminum Co. in a formal statement last night charged the collection of dues was the entire question involved and charged the incident cited by the union, which demanded the worker's discharge, removal or "discipline" was "but an afterthought." It also said the walkout violated the union's agreement to take up grievances through a committee.

Meanwhile in Washington the National Defense Commission said a member of its labor division likely would be sent here to aid E. C. McDonald, Conciliator of the Federal Labor Department, to settle the dispute and get the plant back at work on several hundred thousand dollars worth of defense orders.

Vultee Work Resumed

Downey, Calif., Nov. 27. (AP).—Eighty per cent of the normal number of day workers were put back to work at the Vultee Aircraft plant which re-opened with pay increases today after a 12-day C. I. O. strike. Night shifts were resumed tonight.

Resumption of normal operations was delayed somewhat by detailed examination of every worker who went back into the plant. Each was required to qualify for a new entry pass. Even birth certificates and other data were re-checked.

Twenty basic training planes for the U. S. Army were left unfinished when the strike began November 15.

Dam Settlement Seen

Gilbertsville, Ky., Nov. 27 (AP).—Quick settlement of a strike which stopped work on the giant $112,000,000 Kentucky dam project, largest of the Tennessee Valley Authority's system, was predicted tonight by union and TVA representatives.

Project Manager George Jessup said the walkout today of union workers, all skilled laborers, threw approximately 2,000 men out of work.

Jessup said the union workmen left their jobs in protest against the dismissal—or suspension—of Walter E. Blanton, a structural steel foreman, for fighting with two Negroes.

The project head said Blanton and the Negroes were suspended until their cases are heard by a board of TVA representatives and union officials. Blanton asserted he was discharged.

U. S. Decides 'Part' of an Employe in State Quotas Actually Means Whole Man

By Edward Ryan

Lindsay C. Warren, new Comptroller General, has just yanked the Government out of a bizarre administrative tangle which had Federal office managers wondering how they should go about hiring a "fractional part of an employe."

It can't be done, Warren pointed out, but his decision revealed that this conclusion was reached only after considerable head-scratching in the Justice Department, the General Accounting Office, Federal Security Agency and maybe even the White House.

If appointing officers reach the stage of wondering whether they can hire a whole employe, or just a "fractional part," they can just go ahead and hire the whole man, Warren's decision said in effect, and they don't even have to bother about their grade school lessons in fractions.

The mix-up stems from the highly technical civil service apportionment rules which control appointments to Government jobs in the District.

Under the apportionment system, each State is entitled to a share of the Federal jobs in Washington and this is determined on the basis of State population. Last spring Congress, in appropriating funds for the Federal Security Agency and other independent offices, said that the State job-quota system should be applied to noncivil-service employes in these agencies.

Their action barred salary payments to any person whose appointment would increase his State's quota over its proper mark, measured on a basis of population.

Application of this rule eventually stirred up considerable trouble in the Federal Security Agency, and so Paul McNutt, Federal Security administrator, took the problem up with the General Accounting Office.

McNutt's appeal said that in carrying out the rule set by Congress, his organization had gone on the theory that in making the necessary computations, "fractional parts of employes could be overlooked."

He pointed out, however, that Attorney General Jackson, in a ruling for the President on August 28, had said where a State is entitled to a fractional part of an employe, one employe may be appointed.

"On that theory," said McNutt, "it would appear that if a State is entitled to a certain number of whole employes and a fraction, the fraction should be recognized and that another employe should be appointed; that is, if a State is entitled to 2¼ employes, for instance, three should be allotted to it."

McNutt was right, said Warren.

The Comptroller General pointed out, however, that "in the use of fractions the general rule is to drop any fraction less than one-half, and to consider a fraction of one-half or more as a whole number."

On this score, Warren said, he thought the original policy of the Federal Security Agency, of overlooking fractions, was better than the Attorney General's idea.

"However," Warren declared, "as there is involved here primarily a question of eligibility for appointment in the Federal service, this office, in applying the appropriations restrictions in the audit of accounts, will interpose no objection should you deem it proper for administrative purposes, in determining State quotas, to adopt the view of the Attorney General in regard to 'fractional parts of employes.'"

In another ruling, Warren held that Government funds could not be used to pay the salary of John Snure, jr., information aide for Selective Service Headquarters, from September 1 to October 14.

In presenting Snure's case to the General Accounting Office, Selective Service officials explained that he had started to work for them September 1, and was assigned to the Army War College. In the absence of a personnel officer, it was explained, no report was made to anyone about placing him on the pay roll, and during the unsettled period of organization, it was assumed that he was working as a volunteer.

His status was not discovered until October 1, and his formal appointment was delayed two weeks more, until cleared by the Civil Service Commission.

Warren explained that it was a well-established rule that "compensation may not be paid to an employe prior to the effective date of his appointment." He added:

"I have no alternative under existing laws but to conclude that Mr. Snure may not be paid compensation for services rendered prior to October 14, the effective date of his appointment."

Katherine Peters, Typist, Kills Self

A certificate of suicide was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night after an investigation of the death of Miss Katherine L. Peters, 58-year-old stenographer, of 1210 Twelfth Street Northwest.

Miss Peters was found unconscious in her gas-filled apartment about 10:30 a. m. yesterday by Jules Backenheimer, 58, of 1118 Robinson Street Northwest. She was dead when a doctor from Emergency Hospital arrived.

All gas jets on the kitchen stove were open Detective Sergt. Fred Rawlinson said. A note addressed to Mrs. Ann Hudson, of Chicago, the woman's sister, was found. It said briefly that ill health was the reason for the act.

An automatic refrigerator in the apartment had been turned off, police said, apparently to prevent the escaping gas from exploding.

Growing Pains Seen For Gravelly Point

Capt. Odell Says Congestion in 1947 May Prove Costly

Many of the facilities at Washington's National Airport, now nearing completion at Gravelly Point, will require "extensive and costly alterations or replacement before their newness has worn off," Capt. L. L. Odell, engineering consultant of the Pan-American Airways, last night told the Washington Society of Engineers.

Addressing the society's thirty-fifth annual dinner at the Mayflower Hotel, Capt. Odell, who in six months established bases for the China Clipper run, declared that the airport, dedicated last September by President Roosevelt, "may be expected to become saturated with traffic by 1947."

While paying tribute to the airport's facilities as "fine examples of architectural engineering and skill," Capt. Odell stated that the program of replacement and alteration he foresaw at what Government engineers have described as a "model" air field "could be minimized substantially by more piercing vision as to future needs."

Another dinner speaker, Dr. Chalmers F. MacKenzie, president of the National Research Council of Canada and a distinguished educator and soldier, declared that a nation, to be safe, cannot prepare for defense "without preparing for war."

"We don't think much of defense," he declared. "It was the defense complex that led to the Maginot Line; it was the same complex that led to Canada's defense council that did nothing and it was the same kind of thinking that led Great Britain to her middle-of-the-road policy—and you know the middle of the road is Coventry and Birmingham.

Must Think of War

"If you think of defense you're sunk. Thinking of war is the only way to avoid it."

England, Dr. MacKenzie said, "had people who did think of war." These, he explained, were the military engineers and the civilian scientists associated with them who at the very outset of the war were able to put England on a parity with her foe in the quality of her fighting machines if not in their quantity.

"England was not unprepared for war from the standpoint of science and engineering," he said. "Those scientific men proved that in this respect dictatorships have no advantage over democracies."

By way of example, Dr. MacKenzie pointed out that the problem of German magnetic mines was "solved overnight."

Everything But Millionaires

Canadian industry which is making everything for war "but large battleships, airplane engines and millionaires," will be completely controlled by the government inside a year, Dr. Mackenzie said.

In Canada's economy today, he stated, there no longer are salesmen and industrialists think no longer of dividends, but in terms of man hours of work, no longer of costs, but simply of "can we do it?" He spoke significantly of changes of the war is making in the economic system of the country and added that he would "bet that these changes are going to be big and fundamental."

The Nation's existing airport system is inadequate for present needs, Capt. Odell declared, pointing out that engineers expect air passenger traffic to exceed 8,000,000,000 passenger miles by 1950 in aircraft that will make obsolete today's most advanced types.

Capt. Odell envisioned tomorrow's fighting airplanes as "air battlewagons and air troopships," and declared that the Nation needs "thousands" of military airfields.

Would Spend 10 Billion

Only by a broad program of airport construction involving expenditure as much as $10,000,000,000, he said, "will we be able to avoid a situation amounting to practical immobilization of our new air arm through congestion induced by its own numbers. The Nazis with their hundreds of airports in Germany and the invaded countries can put no more than 4,000 airplanes in the air simultaneously, he said. He estimated that Britain can throw no more than 2,000 planes into combat.

More than 200 engineers attended the dinner. Guests of honor included Rear Admiral L. O. Colbert, director of the Coast and Geodetic Survey; Rear Admiral Russell R. Waesche, Coast Guard commandant; Rear Admiral Harvey F. Johnson, chief of the Coast Guard materiel division, and Dr. H. S. Jacoby, engineering professor emeritus at Cornell University. Clay L. Jennison, society president, introduced the speaker.

Zone Ruling Put Off on 16th St. Hotel

Chain Requests Variance on 90-Foot Elevation in Area For 10-Story Edifice

The Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday deferred action on an application by the Statler Hotel Corporation to build a $5,500,000 hotel at 1001 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

The corporation, represented by A. R. Clas, requested the adjustment board to grant a variance from the 90-foot elevation district (which permits an eight-story building) in order to construct a ten-story hotel. Clas said at a hearing yesterday that provisions would be made in the building to take care of automobiles.

At a meeting following the hearing the board granted the appeals of five other applicants, denied one and withheld action on three.

The proposed hotel, which would be built along the east side of Sixteenth Street between K and L, would contain 1,000 rooms, it was stated.

An appeal of the Central Union Mission for permission to construct a $100,000 seven-story side addition to the present building at 613 C Street Northwest, also was put aside for further study by the board. The new structure would be known as the John S. Bennett Memorial Building, in honor of the late leader of the mission. Leon Chatelain, jr., is architect for the proposed structure.

Appeals granted by the board follow:

Vernon Owens to permit the erection of two 2-family flats at 3115-3117 Newton Street Northeast. The petitioner had asked for permission to build four or five family flats on this site.

The Florence Crittenton Home to permit erection of a one-story addition to the Crittenton Home, 4739 Reservoir Road Northwest.

Sophia Manset for permission to change a nonconforming use from a restaurant to a delicatessen store at 500 Twenty-third Street Northwest.

Edward A. Garver, for permission to establish an infant asylum and maternity hospital at Sargent Road Northeast, near the District line.

The appeal of Mrs. E. E. Phillips to permit erection of a one-story rear addition to the dwelling at 1313 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, was denied by the adjustment board.

The board deferred action on the appeal by the Adams estate for permission to establish a gasoline service station at the southwest corner of Seventeenth and M Streets Northwest. One other appeal deferred is the petition by the Rainbow Dyeing and Cleaning Corporation to permit the erection of a second-story addition to the nonconforming laundry at 732 Sixth Street Southeast.

Pre-Marital Test Urged By Citizens

Southwest Group To Investigate Trolley Service In Seventh Street

Southwest Citizens Association, meeting for the first time in the new Jefferson Junior High School, Seventh and H Streets Southwest, last night supported a proposal to establish a pre-marital medical examination law in the District. The action was taken on recommendation of Dr. Everett J. Gordon, chairman of the public health committee.

In a second resolution, the unit opposed a move to convert the playground of the old Jefferson School, Sixth and School Streets Southwest, into an automobile parking lot.

Plans were announced for the association to sponsor, in cooperation with the Health Department, the dedication of the new Southwest Health Center, Second and I Streets Southwest, on December 18.

The organization voted to maintain close liaison with the Agriculture Department Post, American Legion, in order to coordinate community projects. R. T. Keith, service bureau manager of Washington Gas Light Co., explained the proposal for 100 per cent natural gas supply in the District. The Community Chest was given $25.

Morris Fradin was named chairman of the public utilities committee after a strong denuciation of street car service along Seventh Street Southwest. His committee was then commissioned to investigate.

Other new committee chairmen were appointed as follows: boys' club, Francis Hart; commercial development, Robert Marshall; education, the Rev. Harry V. Porter; hospitality, Mrs. Louise Frazier; housing, Miss Margaret Bell Merrill; law and legislation, Harry S. Wender; library, Mrs. Bessie Parrish; membership, Joseph J. Schneider; police and fire, Raymond L. Robinson; public celebrations, Capt. Sidney Marks; public health, Dr. Gordon; public welfare, William Brody; assistant chairman, public welfare, Carlos Van Leer; streets and lights, G. Bird Cantwell.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Kirsten Flagstad sings Wednesday night in Constitution Hall as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Edwin McArthur. Program: Overture to "Egmont" (Beethoven), "Ah, perfido" (Beethoven), "Tod und Verklaerung" (Richard Strauss), "Berfreit," "Allerseelen" and "Caecilie" (Strauss), Preludes to Acts I and II of "Lohengrin," "Siegfrieds Tod" from "Die Goetterdaemmerung," "Allmaecht'ge Jungfrau" from "Tannhaeuser," "Du bist der Lenz" from "Die Walkuere" (Wagner).

Once again the superb singing of Kirsten Flagstad was heard in Constitution Hall last evening, this time soaring over the accompaniments of the National Symphony Orchestra, and once again a crowded house paid her the grateful tribute of ovation after ovation. Honest artistry, such as hers, artistry without pretense and without pose, never has and never will fail to stimulate admiration and enkindle enthusiasm. Honest applause is what she receives, applause motivated by deeply stirred emotion, and not the brittle clatter excited by artificial cleverness or superficial brilliance. Simplicity and truth are the spirit of her art, and from neither of them does she deviate for a moment.

BROWN

It was for such an ideal singer that Beethoven conceived his scena and aria, "Ah, Perfido," and whether or not he was disappointed in the way it was sung by Josepha Duschek we do not know. It is the kind of dramatic utterance which lesser artists distort and degrade in their histrionic efforts to be overwhelmingly emotional. Kirsten Flagsted voiced it with a noble anger, a wounded dignity and a profound sorrow. Her interpretation was as powerful in restraint as in indignation.

Her readings of three lieder by Richard Strauss, "Befreit," "Allerseelen" and "Caecilie," were instinct with her feeling for lyric style and impassioned by her vitality. Her operatic sense, functioning always as an adjunct of the dramatic moment and therefore with perfect naturalness, was splendidly disclosed in Elizabeth's "Allmaecht'ge Jungfrau" from "Tannhaeuser" and Sieglinde's "Du bist der Lenz" from "Die Walkuere."

As a framework for the songs chosen by Mme. Flagstad, the program had entire consistency by excluding all composers save Beethoven, Wagner and Richard Strauss. Granting that virtue, one must protest that it was too long and tiring, what with the overture to "Egmont," the mortal visions of "Tod und Verklaerung," two preludes from "Lohengrin" and "Siegfrieds Tod." Nor did the frequently deliberate tempi of Edwin McArthur give it the illusion of being any shorter.

McArthur knows his scores thoroughly, gives his cues precisely (if with a little unnecessary emphasis) and builds climaxes well. But in his conducting, at least for one observer, there was lacking the magnetic impulse which inspirits the musicians of an orchestra.

Grand Jury Weighs Evidence In Sniper Case

The District Grand Jury yesterday heard and took under advisement what prosecutors termed "strong evidence" to connect 25-year-old John Eugene Eklund with the sniper-slayings of three colored men here.

The grand jury is expected to report in District Court late this week or on its regular presentation date next Tuesday its decision on whether the former engineering student shall stand trial for the recent killings of Samuel Banks, Theodore Goffney and Hylan McClaine. Assistant District Attorney John W. Fihelly, who presented the case at yesterday's closed hearing, said the Government had a good case.

Eklund, who lives at 2109 F Street Northwest, was held for grand jury action by a coroner's jury after an all-day hearing Tuesday. Banks and Goffney were shot to death from behind October 8 as they sat on a park bench. McClaine died October 15 when shot by a mysterious gunman as he walked along a lonely street with a girl.

Technologists Of D. C. Hear Work Praised

Have Helped Make Medicine Efficient, Dr. Konzelmann Says

Laboratory technicians, by relieving physicians of much technical detail, have improved the efficiency of medical practice, the District Medical Technologists were told last night.

Meeting at the Roger-Smith Hotel, the technologists heard Dr. Frank Konzelmann, professor of pathology at Temple University, discuss the increasing importance of laboratory work in connection with diabetes, liver disease, the anemias and coma produced by dysentery. He added:

"The laboratory technician is being trained nowadays in all phases of chemistry, biology, and bacteriology, and although she lacks a knowledge of disease processes in man, she is thoroughly familiar with animal physiology and with analytical techniques.

"By releasing the physician of these technical matters, she gives him more opportunity to apply the results of analysis to patients at the bedside."

Guests at the meeting, and the banquet which preceded it, included Dr. E. Clarence Rice, of Children's Hospital; Dr. C. P. Cake and Dr. Jacob J. Weinstein, of Gallinger Hospital; Dr. Robert Kasson, of Walter Reed Hospital, and Col. J. E. Ash, of the Army Medical Museum.

Other speakers included Dr. H. H. Schreiber, president-elect of the organization, and Miss Mary Wolford, present president.

Mr. Gray was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage Tuesday night while riding home on a streetcar and died several hours later at Emergency Hospital. He was a resident of Montgomery County for 27 years.

'Old Timers' Recall Good Old Days When a Stove Heated Edifice, And One Tells of Courting Days Long Ago

From four "old-timers," with a combined church membership of 189 years, to Mrs. Fannie Wege, who joined seven months ago, all had a great time at last evening's "church night" phase of Gorsuch Methodist Church's ninetieth birthday celebration.

As the fellowship program began in the parish hall at Fourth and L Streets Southwest, the members chuckled as they saw themselves going to cthurch, romping with junior and in sundry other poses in "movies" shown by Edwin Donaldson, of the congregation.

Donaldson is one of four generations in the Gorsuch Church, the others being his daughter, Mrs. Helen Gardiner; her sons, Robert, 8, and Richard, 5, and his mother, 74-year-old Mrs. Rose Emma Donaldson. Mrs. Donaldson was unable to attend last night.

When the Rev. Richard T. Scholl, Gorsuch pastor, asked his flock for recollections of the old days, 85-year-old Mrs. Ella Rowe, who joined 65 years ago, said "it's been so long I don't remember." But with some coaching from the sidelines, she recalled "instigating" the first turkey supper 53 years ago. One has been held annually since.

G. H. Mose, who came to the church (then Methodist Episcopal) in 1896 when 20 years old, recalled attending services under the Rev. W. H. Richardson, of whom he said that "tears ran down his cheeks when he preached."

Mrs. Elizabeth P. Donaldson smilingly recollected "courting days" at Gorsuch, and how she became engaged to one man, but "didn't marry that one," became engaged to another, and married him. Seventy-one-year-old Mrs. E. J. Warren looked back to the times of "the old frame church and stove," and regretted that only a dozen of the members who attended 25 years ago were there because of the shift in population from the Southwest.

"We never had anything but happy and pleasant times in this old church," said Mrs. Rowe.

The anniversary week celebration, which started last Sunday, will continue tonight with the Rev. John R. Esalas, of Baltimore, Gorsuch pastor from 1914 to 1917, as guest speaker.

Midway Civic Association Emphasizes Welfare Work

Youngest of Colored Citizens Groups Now Has 320 Members; Plans Underway For Distribution of Christmas Baskets

This is the sixtieth article in a series about associations of citizens in the District of Columbia.

Youngest but one of the largest of the colored associations, the Midway Civic Association works for better school facilities, improved playground and traffic facilities and cleaner alleys in its area in northwest Washington.

JOHNSON

During its two-year history, the civic association has grown to a membership of 320. One of its members, Lieut. Col. Howard D. Queen, was elected president of the Federation of Civic Associations last week.

Welfare work is emphasized. Last year the association sent 100 baskets of food and clothing to the needy during the Christmas season and this month more than $40 was set aside for the same purpose. Each summer the association sends a boy from its neighborhood to camp for two weeks.

The area served by Midway extends from Florida and Connecticut Avenues to P and Fourteenth Streets. Meetings are held on the first Thursday of the month in the Morgan School, 1773 California Avenue Northwest.

Stated objectives of the association are "to unite the citizens of this community for the common good, to promote their interests, and to cooperate with the civic and civil authorities in protecting the unfortunate."

It works closely with the Health Department in the promotion of sanitation in its part of the city. Another aim is beautification of Morgan School grounds, for which the members donated funds last year.

Officers include George W. Johnson, president; Arthur Jackson, vice president; Miss Ursula Jackson, recording secretary; Miss Eunice Quander, corresponding secretary; Miss Louise Walker, financial secretary; James Campbell, treasurer; Henry Penn, legal adviser, and Joseph Jenkins, chaplain.

Burial Tomorrow For H. J. Jackson In Alexandria

Funeral services for Harry J. Jackson, 68, retired Washington and Alexandria real estate operator and more lately choir director of two Alexandria churches, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Cunningham funeral home, Alexandria, with burial in Ivy Hill Cemetery there.

Mr. Jackson, who died Friday at his home, 1934 Arlington Ridge Road, Arlington, Va., was director of the Second Presbyterian and Grace Church choirs for about seven years before he became ill nearly a year ago. For more than 20 years previously he was engaged in the real estate business.

Born in Kent, England, Mr. Jackson migrated to Rochester, N. Y., as a young man and lived there and in Detroit before coming to Washington in 1910. In 1934 he moved to Arlington. He was a singer by avocation, known for a trained tenor voice, and took an active part in church affairs in addition to his choir work. Surviving is one daughter, Miss Janet F. Jackson, of Arlington.

District Selectees Are Inducted

3. ON RECORD go the fingerprints of Selectee Albert Sawyer. Corpl. Herman A. Wagner inks the trainee's fingers. The men, selected to bear arms for Uncle Sam, told clerks the names of their beneficiaries

"Not in glorification of war but for the preservation of peace . . ."

The pomp and ceremony of farewell to the District's first draft contingent, a prelude to a year of serious, unsentimental drilling for defense, came yesterday at the National Guard Armory.

Seated in the postage stamp drill hall of the aging, ramshackle one-time hotel, 27 prospective soldiers in the new citizen-armies heard words of praise and resolution from national and local selective service officials, the District Commissioners, and representatives of civic groups.

Pausing thoughtfully before he started talking into a microphone, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Capital draft head, then spoke against "glorification of war."

"You are going into training for the preservation of peace," he said. "You will look back with pleasure upon this year, you will come back better men . . . but you're not going to a picnic, by any means."

Self-conscious at the several hundred wives, and parents, sweethearts and friends who stood behind their chairs, the selectees then heard National Selective Service Director Dykstra declare "the eyes of the Nation are upon you—the eyes of a Nation aware of a new kind of responsibility."

"I salute you as comrades in arms," Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey told the young men.

"Clear the way for the rest of us who are going to follow you," said A. Z. Wood, president of the Junior Board of Commerce, all of whose members are 21 to 35 years old.

Simply, "Good luck, boys," smiled Commissioner J. Russell Young.

Then the 27 registrants present were introduced to the assemblage. Three others were at Walter Reed Hospital in the lung X-ray stage of the induction process that had been going on since 7:30 a. m.

Embarrassed, for the most part, a few laughing, the future soldiers rose, ducked their heads quickly in acknowledgment of the hand-clapping, sat down again. One hero who wished to remain unsung dodged behind the chair in front of him as a phoptographer focused a camera on him.

The ceremonies ended as the 27 filed up to shake hands with draft officials and Army representatives of the Third Corps Area, at whose reception center, Fort Meade, they were to appear later in the day.

Settling back quickly into the matter-of-fact induction process, interrupted by the formalities, the selectees were marched back to the induction center, 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest.

Unceremoniously they awaited their turns for examination by seven specialists, were finger printed, and told clerks the names of their beneficiaries.

Their last civilian luncheon for some time was eaten at the Continental Hotel, last night, with induction details behind them, they were on their way to camp.

1. 6,000 POUNDS of dextrine is received each day by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing to make the "stickum" for postage stamps. Water is added and . . .

2. . . . THE "STICKUM" is heated, run into tubs like this one tended by Robert Spicer. It's gum now and the mixture is passed through . . .

Lick 'Em, Like 'Em—

Uncle Sam has a new problem, and the sweet "stickum" used on the backs of postage stamps has a new and novel market. Government employes have recently been eating it—for dessert. And Uncle is trying to make them stop.

Employes eating in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing cafeteria, which adjoins the postage stamp gum-making kitchens, it is reported, have been dipping into the product around lunchtime.

Made from roots of the cassava, an edible vegetable grown on the island of Jamaica, the adhesive is received at the bureau here in the form of a white powder. It is cooked, mixed and stirred in large kettles and emerges with all the appeal of tapioca pudding.

Amused at first, officials have now issued an appeal asking sweet-toothed printers and engravers to stop the extra-curricular eating. And they keep an eye on the gum at lunchtime, too.

3. . . . PIPES that open directly over presses that print the stamps. The gum is tastey and, according to reports, serves as dessert for some workers' lunches

4. JUANITA PITTMAN, of California, "samples" the stamps that will carry a letter to her boy friend back home. Do you like it, Juanita?

Ancient Art Revived—

Significant of the modern revival of the ancient art of ceramics are displays of decorative and utilitarian pieces modeled in clay now at the Departmental Auditorium.

The displays are the work of Washington artists, placed there as part of their observance of National Art Week. In addition, local handicrafters give daily demonstrations of the arts and crafts.

Taken during one of the ceramic demonstrations, this series of pictures shows the steps in the production of a ceramic piece. The demonstrator, who explained the steps, one by one, to an interested audience, is Mary Crabtree.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We will never believe, as the grumblers do, that the Redskins pulled their punches coincident with their defeat by the Giants the other day. The case they are trying to make out is that the Redskins, by losing to the Giants, made a title game attraction out of what otherwise would be a meaningless battle with the Philadelphia Eagles here on Sunday.

POVICH

Obvious as it is that the Redskins' defeat at New York will improve the gate here with the Eagles, because the Eastern Division title will now be riding on the outcome. But we doubt if it was planned that way. We may be naive, but we think professional football is on the level for a great many reasons.

Number one in that latter list is our conviction that Coach Ray Flaherty would never be a party to any such skullduggery and would personally take a swipe at the guy who hinted that he wasn't trying to win. And the same goes for every professional football player we ever knew. Until you travel the same trains with them and stay at the same hotels and see the grimness they take on, you can't quite appreciate their fierce pride in winning football. As for deliberately getting themselves licked, they wouldn't know how to start.

There are some smart gentlemen among the club owners, smart enough to realize that at the first revelation of any phoney business their profitable enterprise would collapse amid the debris where once stood public confidence in their game. Pro football has won a hard fight for that public confidence. Its early beginnings were none too fashionable and the game's present high estate has been pyramided from the efforts of crusading club owners.

The understanding football fan won't question the legitimacy of the Redskins' defeat by the Giants anyway. He knows that as long as a football is shaped the way it is and can take the crazy bounce that it does, any team can lose a football game. Particularly does the long-time fan know. He isn't one of the grumblers who refused to reconcile himself with the Redskins' defeat.

Quickest to misconstrue are the Redskins' newly-won fans, who are in the majority. The Redskins' following in Washington is comprised in a large part of folks who didn't discover football until two or three years ago and then were charmed by the excitement of the Redskins' performance. They didn't have a native football background to start with and maybe at this late date they can't quite understand how a Redskin team that licked the Giants, 21-7, earlier in the season, could be licked by the Giants by the same score.

Whereas the long-time football goer who knows it can happen in football was disposed to kiss off the Redskins' defeat merely as a bad day for the Redskins, the newly-created fans demanded an explanation and began to hint that all was not legitimate. To these mathematically-minded folks it didn't add up, and it won't until they see a lot more of football.

We have a letter from one of the skeptics who hints at dark things and demands to know "why Andy Farkas kept running out of bounds toward the finish of the game when the Redskins were behind and time was running out. Valuable seconds were lost while they were bringing the ball back to the field to put it in play, just as if the Redskins didn't need all the time they could save."

Ho-hum. We're answering that one right here. Andy Farkas did everything that he was accused of. He ran the ball out of bounds deliberately, and it did take some time to bring it back to the field. But the moment Farkas stepped over the sideline, the time automatically stopped. Farkas wasn't wasting time, he was saving time. Had he not run out of bounds, time would have continued and robbed the Redskins of several plays. They didn't want the few additional yards Farkas might have gained. They wanted a touchdown, at that point.

But before pro football can hold its head completely high, it must put an end to its penny-wise nonsense that might well make a mockery out of the title race. We have a bit of that in the last week of the season when the Philadelphia Eagles come to town to meet the Redskins in the game that may determine the Eastern Division title.

Three weeks ago, the Eagles, owning not a single victory, started releasing players to save money on the pay roll. Eight Eagles got the gate, to save salaries. Latest to go was big Lester McDonald, 235-pound tackle whom the Detroit Lions bought. Three weeks ago it didn't seem that the Eagles' game with the Redskins would be important—the Redskins were supposed to have the title clinched by this week.

But all of a sudden the Eagles' game here has become vastly important. A defeat for the Redskins and a victory for the Dodgers would tie up the title. If they beat the Eagles, the Redskins will now be slapping down a team that has only 14 substitutes on the bench, including those who may be injured. It will also be a Philadelphia team that has had only two days rest since its last game.

It would be a hollow victory for the Redskins, and how would the Dodgers feel about it? Until there is a league rule demanding that all teams operate at the maximum strength of 33 players to the finish of the season, there will always be the possibility that the season will end on the sour note that this one has struck.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 27.—The trouble with hockey (address all indignant replies beginning, "Well, what's wrong with it, y'bum?" to Box 13-X) is that the owners and coaches have systematically eradicated individuality from the game. They are, as a whole, frugal and cautious and apparently do everything they can to make it a team, instead of a star's game, for fear that the star will secretly hold them up for more dough at the end of the year.

CONSIDINE

The day of the big salary is gone. Nels Stewart made $20,000 a season with the old Montreal Maroons. Eddie Shore made about the same with the Bruins. Charley Conacher was a high-priced man with the Maple Leafs and Ching Johnson got about what he wanted during his prime with the Rangers. They were great, instantly recognizable players. But no better, if as good, as some of the tough young muggs they've got playing this game today.

But today, instead of reading about Wally Stanowski, who is probably as good a defenseman as Johnson was, you read about his team, the Maple Leafs. Young Roy Conacher, brother of the famous old Conachers, is as good at this stage in his development as his brother Charley was. But the average sports page reader doesn't hear much about him, compared to his team, the Bruins.

If a kid comes along today with the personality and skill of the men who made hockey the backbone of the existence of million dollar sports arenas the coaches and owners seem deliberately to tone him down. If a kid looks elegant from the press box or the warmingly barren grandstands he is sure to suffer a sudden case of anonymity. For when the hockey writers storm to the dressing room after some fine-looking performance to quiz the coach about him it develops that he is a kind of lucky bum who would never have gotten past the foul line if he hadn't been helped by the team.

They call the National Hockey League the big league, but they are strapped by a rule that will always keep the minor baseball leagues minor. That is the rule limiting the salaries. The top salary in the league now is set at $6,500—$65,000 to the club. This rule was put in a few years ago as a result of the holdout of Earl Seibert, when he was a Ranger. The appalled Rangers got rid of him (he wanted $1,000 more) and today he serves as a kind of horrible warning to younger fellows who might want to pull the same raw stunt. He made another mistake. He showed his clippings to Lester Patrick, when Patrick demanded to know what he had done the season before. That's apparently bad.

We saw the first period of the Maple Leafs (and why isn't that Maply Leaves, pally?) victory over the Rangers Tuesday night on Ted Deglin's television set. Very nicely done and pretty thrilling—for all the frustration that is apparently an incorrigible part of the game. Then we drove over to the Garden to see the excitement and found the joint half filled, though this was a case of two truly topnotch teams meeting for the first time this year in New York. The same afternoon Col. John Reed Kilpatrick and other hockey tycoons of note had held a luncheon, with a view to jabbing a little adrenalin into the veins of the game, and had typically neglected to inject a single personality into the lectures—although a couple of the Rangers were across the street in the hospital with busted seams.

You might say, well, why the blazes don't the writers take matters in their own hands and build up the men who ostensibly stand out? The trouble is that there are only a handful of men who really know exactly what is happening out there. The average writing bloke has a translator, invariably the coach, and the coach is opposed to building up a fellow, whether he deserves it or not.

The modern game takes more skill, better reflexes, more intelligence and a better memory for involved plays than did hockey of ten

Cliff Lenz to Miss Saturday's Game With Army; Melissa, Good Luck Dog, Will Make Trip, as Will the Goat

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 27.—With alternate teams of about equal weight and general playing ability, besides a host of capable replacements to throw into the breach, Navy's football squad was pronounced ready tonight for the annual struggle with the rival West Point Cadets to be staged in the Municipal Stadium, Philadelphia, on Saturday.

Today's practice workout, next to the last before the squad of 43 players entrain for the Quaker City late tomorrow afternoon, again was featured by a defensive dummy scrimmage against Army's aerial tactics. The Cadets' overhead attack appears to be Navy's only fear, as the local troops demonstrated in all previous contests that their general defensive strength rates with the best in collegiate ranks. Their chief weakness lies in lack of a scoring punch and Maj. Swede Larson, head coach, and his assistants believe this has been corrected during the last few days.

Malcolm to Start

Coach Larson reasserted today that Cliff Lenz, of Latrobe, Pa., 200-pound plunging back, kicker and pass receiver, would not be available for service Saturday because of continued trouble with leg muscles and that his place would be taken by Ev Malcolm, southpaw passer and kicker, as well as reliable ball toter. Larson also announced that Wes Gebert, from Seattle, Wash., swivel-hipped runner and star of the Notre Dame game in Baltimore, has sufficiently recovered from an ankle injury to be ready for work. He is a back on the so-called "second" eleven.

Enthusiasm was rife among the regiment of 2,600 Midshipmen as the players went through their paces today, but the real climax will come tomorrow when the squad starts for Philadelphia.

Mascots to Make Trip

The Middies will have two official mascots at the big game. Aside from the usual goat, "Billy the Eighth", one of a long line of his strain, athletic powers today decreed that "Melissa" a Schnauzer dog which has cavorted about athletic fields for the last several years as an omen of good luck for junior varsity players, also will make the trip.

Last year certain pressure was brought to bear with the result that this pet Schnauzer was taken along with the goat, and she returned home in the "Believe it or not class," as the Tars bagged a 10 to 0 victory.

But while Navy folk hold supreme confidence in "Melissa" as a good luck omen, yet "Billy the Eighth", big fleecy white goat, draped in

45,000 Fans To See Aggies, Texas Battle

By the Associated Press

Austin, Tex., Nov. 27.—Nineteen triumphs behind them, a second successive Southwest Conference title and a possible Rose Bowl invitation just ahead, the Texas Aggies tomorrow play a football game that carries richer rewards than this cattle country history records.

Some 45,000 fans will bulge old Memorial Stadium to watch the giant Red machine try to subdue its oldest enemy—University of Texas.

Never has a greater football team worn the Maroon of Texas A. & M., but tomorrow that makes little difference against a Texas team which carried the inherited jinx that has kept an Aggie eleven from winning in Austin since 1922.

The riotous Aggie team that boasts Jarrin' John Kimbrough, the all-American fullback; Jim Thomason, one of the Nation's outstanding blocking backs and tacklers; Guard Marshall Foch Robnett, perhaps the best in Southwest history, and Marion Pugh, rated one of America's top collegiate forward passers, tonight was the odds-on choice.

But many Aggie teams have come to Austin expecting to have a walkaway, only to have gone away sadly beaten.

Coach Dana X. Bible, of Texas, was able to report, with a slight gleam of satisfaction, that his thunderbolt broken fielder, Cowboy Jack Crain, would be in top condition. Crain has been suffering from a chest injury since the Arkansas game a month ago, and had further trouble with his ankles, but now seems ready to operate.

But most of the Texas offensive is expected to center around Fullback Pete Layden, a passing, punting, running genius who has been sensational in the last two games; steady throughout the season.

The weather forecast is for a clear, crisp day with not too much wind.

Radio Tip Car Seized Near Bowie Track

County Police Watch Auto 3 Days; Persons Fail to Approach

An automobile equipped with a radio sending set and hidden in a clump of woods near Bowie Race Track was seized yesterday by Prince Georges County police after a three-day vigil failed to bring its crew to light.

Working with operatives of the Federal Communications Commission, who had caught the signals of the unlicensed station on the air, the police found the car on Monday.

Since that time the car had been under constant surveillance by relays of police, while a monitoring car was placed a half mile away by the Federal men to catch the illegal broadcasts. When no persons approached the car during this period, the police, believing that their presence had become known to the broadcasters, seized the car, a Hudson bearing Ohio license plates, and impounded it at the Hyattsville substation.

The car had been driven into the woods near the race track within hearing distance of the track announcements made over a loudspeaker. An aerial was stretched between two trees about 75 feet apart and 200 feet from the car.

The operators of the set were believed to have been transmitting race results to persons in Baltimore. The FCC men had heard such a broadcast on the air.

Photographs of the car in its parked position, the aerials, and the sending set were made by Officer Charles Thomsen, official police photographer and identification officer of the county police, for use as evidence in the event that the owners of the car attempt to recover it.

Trip to Coast Is Arranged For Hoyas

Georgetown vs. the University of Santa Clara at Los Angeles on Christmas Day.

That was the official announcement made last night by H. Gabriel Murphy, Georgetown graduate manager, ending speculation as to G. U.'s post-season football intentions.

HAGERTY

Thus it will be the Hoyas, losers of only one game—and that by a 1-point margin—against a Santa Clara team that similarly has been beaten only once, and that defeat a 7-6 loss to Stanford, the West's Rose Bowl nominee.

Georgetown and Santa Clara will be playing for the benefit of the British War Relief Association, it was stated by Murphy. Allan Mowbray, famed British actor who is now a resident of Hollywood and president of the British War Relief Association of Southern California, has been a figure in arranging the game.

Mowbray is flying to Washington today to complete arrangements with Georgetown officials. He was advised by Murphy yesterday that Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown, had given final approval to a trip to the coast by the Hoya squad.

A capacity crowd of 105,000 is expected to see the two teams meet in the Los Angeles Coliseum, it was said by Mowbray, who avowed that the game between two such highly rated teams with its British relief aspects could not fail of being a sell-out. Mowbray pointed out that the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and the city's movie folk were supporting the game.

"Georgetown was interested, of course, in being a party to British relief," said Murphy, "but we are happy also that we could arrange such a feature game for our 18 seniors who are leaving the squad this year. We had hopes that we could present them with an attractive trip of this sort before they graduated.

When it appeared that the Santa Clara game would be arranged after negotiations were started two weeks ago, Georgetown lost interest in prospective Bowl game invitations, according to Murphy.

"We would definitely prefer to play Santa Clara on the Pacific Coast rather than meet another team in the Miami Orange Bowl or the Dallas Cotton Bowl," he said. "Playing on Christmas Day we will not be sharing the January 1 spotlight with various Bowl games and Georgetown will be projected into far more national notice."

Murphy did not divulge the size of the guarantee which Georgetown will receive for its part in the game but declared "it will more than compensate us for the expense of the trip and may represent the most profitable undertaking, financially, in the history of Georgetown teams."

Game Not 'Definite,' Says Santa Clara

San Jose, Calif., Nov. 27 (AP).—Sam Dunne, athletic director at the University of Santa Clara, denied tonight that a Christmas day football game between Santa Clara and Georgetown University had definitely been scheduled.

Announcement that the game would be played was made in Washington.

Dunne said there had been negotiations with the British War Relief Association, sponsors of the proposed contest, but added, "we asked them for a comprehensive proposal in writing for submission to our board of athletic control. To date we have received no such proposal."

Dunne also said he had received no official notification that Georgetown had accepted a bid to play in the game.

High Scoring Marks 1940 Football Season

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 27.—The free-scoring, fun-for-all 1940 college football season comes to a fitting end this week with a double-feature program of games on the old Thanksgiving Day and on Saturday.

When the statisticians get around to figuring things out, this may prove to be the greatest season ever for high scoring, with such notable examples as Penn's 46-28 win over Princeton, Manhattan's 45-41 score over Marquette, and Alabama's 25-21 thriller over Vanderbilt.

Five games overshadow all the rest on this climatic card. Tomorrow's headliner is Texas A. & M.'s invasion of Austin to meet Texas. Saturday it will be Stanford against California on the Pacific Coast, Tennessee against Vanderbilt in the South, Boston College against Holy Cross in New England, and Army against Navy at Philadelphia—the game that once again will bring 102,000 fans into Municipal Stadium, even though the soldiers haven't won a major game since they beat Navy in 1938.

This corner goes into its one-man huddle for the last time, and comes out of it with these last-of-the-season predictions (home teams first, probable attendances in parentheses):

Tom Harmon Wins Heisman Trophy Over Kimbrough

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 27.—Tom Harmon, brilliant halfback of the University of Michigan's football team, was announced tonight as the winner of the Heisman Memorial Trophy given each year by the Downtown Athletic Club of New York to the Nation's outstanding college gridder.

Harmon polled an unprecedented number of points, 1,303, in the countrywide balloting by sports-writers and broadcasters to beat out Jonn Kimbrough, of Texas A. & M., who received 841.

The presentation will be made at a dinner at the Downtown Athletic Club December 9.

The next three choices nationally were George Franck, of Minnesota, 102 points; Frank Albert, of Stanford, 90, and Paul Christman, of Missouri, 66.

Fordham Team Invited to Orange Bowl

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 27.—The ancient cry of from "Rose Hill to Rose Bowl" was discarded tonight when it was learned that the Fordham Rams have received and are expected to accept an invitation to play in the Orange Bowl game at Miami on New Year's Day.

Although Jack Coffey, graduate manager of athletics at the Rose Hill institution refused to be drawn into any discussion about the invitation, reliable sources declared the Orange Bowl Committee has guaranteed the school $35,000 with a privilege of the percentages and that Fordham authorities have accepted.

Foes Agreeable

Coach Jimmy Crowley's charges, beaten only by St. Mary's from California thus far this year, will have as their opponents in the bowl battle the winner of the Mississippi State-Alabama contest on Saturday. Both of these schools, it was learned, has been approached by the committee and have agreed to play.

The Rams play their final game of the season this Saturday against their traditional intra-city rival, New York University.

Four years ago when Fordham had its vaunted "seven blocks of granite" and was in line for the coveted Rose Bowl bid, a comparatively weak N. Y. U. team upset the applecart by scoring a surprising 7-to-6 victory over the Rams in the final game of the campaign.

Met Bamans Twice

Should Alabama win this Saturday against Mississippi State, the Orange Bowl game will be the third time the Crimson Tide will face Fordham on the gridiron. The Rams beat the Southerners in 1933 and Alabama won a 7-to-6 thriller last year. Fordham and Mississippi State have never met.

With this deal closed it was reported in reliable football circles that the Texas Aggies will be invited to meet Stanford in the Rose Bowl encounter and Tennessee and Boston College will play in the Sugar Bowl.

Catholic University Announces 13-Game Court Schedule

Cards Play 8 Contests In New Loop

Squad of Fifteen Turns Out Today For First Practice; Duke Opens Season

Catholic University's shortest basketball schedule in years, only 13 games, was released yesterday, including eight games in the newly formed Mason-Dixon Conference.

Coach Fod Cotton will hold the first practice today and a squad of 15 is expected to answer the initial call at 4 p. m.

Cotton has little time to get the squad in shape as the two biggest games are first on the schedule, Duke here December 20 and Navy at Annapolis, January 8. Eight of the games will be played here.

The Cards will play four of the eight Conference teams in home-and-home series, Mt. St. Marys, Western Maryland, Loyola and Washington College, while they have no games scheduled with the other teams, American U., Delaware, Johns Hopkins and Towson Teachers.

The four leading teams at the end of the season will qualify for a championship playoff in Baltimore.

Seven letter-men will report from last season's squad, whose defeats far overshadowed the victories. Gene Daly, former Western High player will be back with Joe Carrig, Howard Schropp, Pete Sachon, Jack Reidy, Joe LaMarca and Mike Cherello.

December 15, alumni, at Brookland. 3 p. m.; 20, Duke University, here.
January 8, Navy, away; 10, Mount St. Mary's, away; 14, St. Francis (Pa.), here; 16, Western Maryland, here; 18, Loyola, away; 22, Mount St. Mary's, here.
February 5, Washington College here; 11, Western Maryland, away; 18, Loyola, here; 20, St. Vincent's College, here; 26, Washington College, away.

William and Mary May Be Tempe's Sun Bowl Foe

By the Associated Press

Tempe, Ariz., Nov. 27.—The faculty athletic committee of Arizona State Teachers College at Tempe voted tonight to accept a bid to represent the Border Conference in the Sun Bowl football game in El Paso, Tex., New Year's Day.

It will be the second straight year that the Bulldogs, 1939 and 1940 conference champions, appear in the sun festival feature. Tempe and Catholic University of Washington, D. C., played a scoreless tie January 1, 1940.

Graduate Manager Tom Lillico said Dr. R. B. Homan, jr., chairman of the Sun Carnival Committee, mentioned Utah University, William and Mary, San Jose, Calif. State, Clemson, and Auburn as under consideration for the second invitation.

Tempe was undefeated in conference play this year but was tied by Texas Mines.

Conn Ends Work For Bout Tonight With Lee Savold

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 27.—Light Heavyweight Champion Billy Conn today finished training for his scheduled 12-round fight with Heavyweight Lee Savold, of Des Moines, in New York on Friday night.

Conn said:

"I feel so good that I wish I was fighting Joe Louis instead of Savold."

Savold held only a brief workout today. He said:

"I hear that Conn is a slow starter. All I can say is that he better get warmed up early on Friday night, or he will find himself being counted out before the third round is over."

High School gymnasiums will again house the D. C. Recreation Department's Basketball Leagues as they did last season when 82 teams competed for the title, won by United Typos.

The G. P. O. and Civil Service Leagues are already under way while others will start between now and January 1, 1941. A church league will be added to the Government and industrial leagues.

Approved board officials will be used for games sponsored by the Recreation Department. The same protest board that served last year, Coaches Bill Reinhart, G. W., Elmer Ripley, Georgetown, and Fod Cotton, Catholic U., will serve.

There are still vacancies in all leagues. Team managers should communicate with Richard S. Tennyson, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, or telephone MIchigan 1155.

Georgetown Boys Club's 105-pound eleven, unbeaten, untied and unscored on this season, and champions of the city, will play host to the Fredericksburg Boys Club Saturday.

The Georgetown boys will be without the services of Leonard Reed, star fullback, who suffered a broken collarbone in last week's contest. The brunt of the attack is expected to be carried by "Sleepy" Thompson and Jim McFarland.

Georgetown's 120-pound team also won the title of the District in their class. Both elevens are in charge of Paul Cassasa, director at the club and former star at St. John's College.

Year's End Brings New Attack on Storck

National Pro Grid League President, Center of Storm Last December, Will Draw Fire of Dodgers' Topping at Annual Meeting

By Al Hailey

Carl Storck, president of the National Football League who was the brunt of an attack by the Redskin management at the close of last year's season, appears in for even more trouble this year, it developed yesterday.

This time the leader of the wolves howling for the scalp of the portly president of the pro league will be Dan Topping, owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Topping, still literally "burned up" at Storck for permitting the Philadelphia Eagles - Pittsburgh Steelers to be played this afternoon just two days before the Eagles play the Redskins, said he planned to bring the matter up at the league's annual meeting in Washington December 7.

Despite Storck's insistence that he had never ruled against the Eagles' postponement of their last Sunday's game until today, Topping, in New York, accused the league president of an about face and said he intended to find out why.

The Dodger owner explained his objection by saying that the Eagles had little enough chance to defeat such a powerful club as the Redskins even with a full week's rest, and that the game today will leave them practically at the mercy of the Washington club.

Dodgers Still Have Chance

Topping's Dodgers are in position to force a playoff with the Redskins for the Eastern Division championship if they beat New York this Sunday and the Eagles should upset the Skins.

Topping's announcement that he intended to carry the fight right into the annual league meeting and demand a showdown recalls last year's onslaught on the position of President Storck led by George Marshall, of the Redskins.

Angered because Storck refused to reverse Referee Bill Halloran's decision which called Bo Russell's now-famous field goal try bad in the Eastern title-deciding game in New York, Marshall tried to have Storck fired and replaced with a man of his own choosing—J. Edgar Hoover, of the FBI, or either of two Chicago sports editors, Arch Ward and Warren Brown.

His attack on Storck was only partly successful. The Storck had his powers severely cut and lost just about everything but his league pass to the football games, but he kept the job. The executive committee seized the right to name officials for league games, and Halloran hasn't been near a Redskin contest all season, however.

Meanwhile, unperturbed over what has been going on in regards to the controversy over the postponement, Coach Ray Flaherty has been quietly grooming his Redskins for a smashing victory Sunday.

Pinkert to Play

While it isn't doubted that Coach Flaherty detests the idea of winning the championship over a team which has had but two day's rest, he has only the title to think of.

The Redskins will be on the rebound from their upset of last Sunday at the hands of a Giant team that hit its stride too late in the season, and little more than a rout can be expected. The Eagles, at full strength, would scarcely be a match for the Redskins, anyway. This was proved when they held a 17-7 lead over the Skins in Philadelphia last October but lost it and the ball game, 34-17.

The Skins will be minus the services of Frank Filchock and Bob Hoffman Sunday, but it is expected that Erny Pinckert will be ready to play. Filchock probably will be released from Emergency Hospital today.

Statistics released by the league's service yesterday showed that Dick Todd has lost his scoring lead to Cleveland's Johnny Drake and Green Bay's Don Hutson, each of whom have 50 points to Todd's 48 for the season. Dick, however, is the fifth leading groundgainer and probably will better his standing this Sunday.

A. U. Basketball Stars in Clinic Tomorrow at Tech

American University's basketball team will demonstrate the finer points of the court game while Approved Board Official Dallas Shirley will explain the 1940 rule changes in the basketball clinic tomorrow night at Tech gym, starting at 8 p. m.

The clinic will be for the Langley area of the D. C. Recreation Department.

Shirley, just returned from a meeting of the Intercollegiate Basketball Officials in New York, will give the rule variations.

Lash Defends Harrier Title In Nationals

Former Indiana U. Star Has Won Event Six Straight Times

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 27.—Don Lash, the 26-year-old former Indiana University foot-racing marvel, turns the tables on himself again tomorrow.

As a vocation, Lash spends his working hours pursuing criminals as a member of the Indiana State police. Tomorrow, as an avocation, he plans to be chased, not by criminals but by the country's top-ranking runners, in the National Amateur Athletic Union cross-country championship.

Lash has won the National A. A. U. harrier title six straight times, a record. When he triumphed at Newark last fall he broke Willie Ritola's mark of five straight victories, counted from 1922 through 1927.

It Snows Again

Barring a sudden and unexpected change in the weather, Lash and the rest of the field will compete under conditions disheartening even to as hardy a soul as a cross-country runner. Today workmen attempted to remove some of the snow from the course over the Meadowbrook Country Club. No sooner was their task completed than it started to snow again. The United States Weather Bureau forecast was for continued snow with the temperature remaining in the low twenties.

This will be the first A. A. U. cross-country over a golf course. The runners will run twice over a course 5,000 meters in length, covering approximately 6¼ miles.

Challenging Lash, who will compete unattached, will be the two men who were closest to him at the finish last year, Gregory Rice, formerly of Notre Dame but now representing the South Bend Athletic Association, was second a year ago, while 29-year-old Joe McCluskey, of Manchester, Conn., was third. Lash's time as he defeated Rice by 20 yards was 30 minutes and 36 seconds.

74 Filed Entries

Seventy-four runners filed entries for the race but because of the bad weather officials of the A. A. U. do not expect more than 50 men to start.

The team championship will be defended by the Millrose Athletic Association of New York. Track experts predict that the New York Athletic Club team will dethrone Millrose. Gene Venzke, McCluskey, Jim Rafferty and Luigi Beccali are the headliners on the New York A. C. team.

Add One Casualty At Grid Game— Cheer Leader Hurt

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Md., Nov. 27.—Hazards of football:

Louise Higgs, Page Hubbard and Jane Meskins, Cambridge High School cheer leaders, lined up to lead a "Fight! Fight! Fight!" yell at a football game.

Climax of the yell came with the cheer leaders swinging imaginary haymakers. But Miss Hubbard was too realistic. She landed a real wallop on Miss Higgs' chin, scoring a clean kayo.

It took 15 minutes and several dashes from the water bucket to restore Louise to normalcy.

Pitt Drills in Snow For Duke Battle

Pittsburgh, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Pitt Panthers galloped through a workout on their slippery, snow-covered practice field today with the third team running Duke plays. After a morning session tomorrow they depart, 33 strong, at 1 p. m., for Durham, N. C., where they will camp until Saturday.

The team appeared in excellent condition, excepting for a cold which settled in the back of Steve Sinco, regular center. He remained indoors with George Allshouse, junior center, taking his post.

Odds on the Panthers, which were even a few days ago, dropped today to 12 to 5 against them.

The William and Mary game, one of the State's outstanding Turkey Day attractions since 1898, will be played on either November 22, one Saturday after Thanksgiving, or on November 27, old Turkey Day date.

Abrams Seeks Revenge Against Chmielewski Tonight

10-Rounder Scheduled At Riverside

Foe Holds Victory Over Washington Middleweight; 4,000 Fans Expected

Revenge will be uppermost in the mind of Washington's prodigal middleweight, Georgie Abrams, when he drops in on his home town tonight for a ten-round fight with Henry Chmielewski at Riverside Stadium.

The fight will be Riverside's first venture on the stadium's new insulated flooring which will be placed over the ice for the ring and ringside spectators' section, and Promoter Ray Alvis last night confidently predicted a turnout of 4,000 for tonight's business.

Abrams, who upset the Cocoa Kid in his last fight here last summer, was defeated by Chmielewski in a fight which was the feature of the National Boxing Association national convention in Milwaukee, Wis., last September.

Abrams Dropped in Rankings

The Washington fighter was at the crest of his career as the fifth-ranking middleweight when he ran into Chmielewski, and the defeat which reduced his rating to No. 9 still rankles in his memory.

As an added incentive to both fighters tonight, Alvis and Matchmaker Goldie Ahern have promised both boys a shot at a middleweight champion in an over-weight match should he win tonight.

If Chmielewski repeats his decision over Abrams the Polish fighter will meet New York's Champion Ken Overlin, Abrams' stablemate. Should Abrams win, he'll be matched with Tony Zale, N. B. A. champion whose contract for the fight already is on hand, Alvis said.

On paper, tonight's fight show shapes up as the best all-around program seen in Washington in recent months, local fight authorities believe.

Ahearn has lined up a card of hard-hitting youngsters who have made good with the customers in previous appearances here, and he will bring out Roy Dunn, former District Golden Gloves middleweight champion, in his professional debut.

The Polish fighter, handled by Tom Walsh, one of the last of the old-time fight managers, has won 19 fights, lost 2 and fought 2 draws over the past year.

Since having his victory streak halted by the Pole, Abrams has been fighting around New York and his last victory came last week, an eight-round decision over Augie Arellano.

The fighters will enter the ring on even terms tonight, with the possibility existing that Chmilewski may be a slight favorite in view of his previous victory.

Stadium Heated

Riverside Stadium's cavernous expanse will be heated by two hot-air blast machines at each end of the hall and by the regular heating system under the seats.

The preliminary card, opening at 8:30 p. m., brings out Dunn in his professional debut against Baby Face Walbert in a four-round warm-up for Dunn.

Fireworks are expected in the two eight-rounders featuring Harry Hurst, hard-punching Canadian lightweight, against Billy Bullock, knockout conqueror of Everett Rightmire, and Irish Eddie Dunne, New York lightweight, against Hershey Kid Chocolate.

Jules Koshlap To Be Honored By Brewers

Jules Koshlap, Georgetown grid star, will be honored between periods of the Washington Brewer-Baltimore Clipper American Professional Basketball League game Sunday night at Riverside Stadium. In the presence of Coach Hagerty and Gabe Murphy, of Georgetown, Coach Reinhart and Max Farrington, of G. W., and Coach Bergman and Fod Cotton, of C. U., who will be guests of the Brewers, Koshlap will be presented a trophy for being the most valuable senior athlete at Georgetown.

Sunday night's game, first home contest of the season for the Brewers, is expected to draw a sizable crowd. Leon Brusiloff's band will provide music between periods and Manager Abe Rosenfield has promised a surprise act for the fans.

There will be a preliminary game between United Typewriters and the Regal five. Time for this game is 8:15 p. m.

Eagles Hosts to Birds Tomorrow at Riverside

The fiercest feud in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League shifts to the ice at Riverside Stadium tomorrow night when the champion Baltimore Orioles make their 1940-41 local debut against the Washington Eagles at Riverside Stadium at 8:30 o'clock.

Washingtonians who have thrilled to this spirited rivalry since the Eagles' Eastern League debut a year ago were subscribing briskly to the advance ticket sale at Riverside yesterday while many reservations also were received from Baltimore's loyal fans.

The Eagles and Orioles are numbered among the biggest teams in the Eastern League of recent years and a smashing duel with no figurative punches pulled is the prospect for tomorrow night. Whereas the light, but clever, Washingtonians were forced to skate around the bruising Baltimoreans a year ago, they now match them in sheer manpower and plenty of action consequently should result tomorrow.

Washington Hunters Bag Limit in Canadian Jaunt

After a hunt in the woods near New Brunswick, Canada, two Washingtonians and a pair of hunters from Wicomico, Md., bagged the limit in deer, two apiece, for a week's work. Shown above with the deer are, Walter Bowling, of Wicomico; Dr. Joseph A. Madden, Washington dentist; Capt. Holland Mason, U. S. A., retired, of Washington, and Tom Bowling, brother of Walter, also of Wicomico. To get their game back to camp the hunters constructed rafts and floated them down the Renoos River. The largest of the bucks weighed 280 pounds

Generals Rated Edge Saturday Over Terps

College Park Game Is Last of Season For Teams Hereabouts

Scores against common opponents give Washington and Lee the edge over Maryland in Saturday's game at College Park, the final college grid action of the year for the local teams. The kickoff is set for 2 p. m.

The edge for the Lexington team is in the Hampden-Sydney game, as the Generals defeated the Tigers, 26 to 0, while the Tigers beat Maryland, 7 to 6. Both schools played Virginia with little difference in comparative scores, the Cavaliers beating W. and L., 20 to 6, and Maryland, 19 to 6.

The season as a whole has been a tremendous disappointment to both schools, but each could salvage a little out of a final victory. The Terps have beaten Western Maryland and figured in one upset, over Rutgers, while the Generals beat the Tigers and also figured in an upset, over Richmond. The visitors took one bad beating, 47 to 0, by Kentucky while the Terps were really walloped twice by Penn, 51 to 0, and Georgetown, 41 to 0.

Washington and Lee gridders worked in the cold until dark yesterday at Lexington, concentrating on defense measures to stop Joe Murphy. The Generals haven't played for two weeks.

Meanwhile Maryland worked at College Park on general offensive and defensive measures. The Terps will be outweighed and outmanned, as usual.

With the lines somewhat even, the backfield is likely to be the deciding point. The Terps have Murphy, Mearle DuVall, Elmer Rigby, Bernie Ulman and John Cordyack as dependables, with four inexperienced reserves, Jack Gilmore, Jimmy Dunn, Louis Chacos and Harold Berry. Joe Hoopengardner and Don Shockey, sophomore backs, will probably be out with injuries.

Bill Ackerman . . . on Fishing

ACKERMAN

Tommy Aitken, known to sportsmen everywhere through his stories of fishes and fishing in many magazines, has again been made executive director of the Greater Miami Fishing Tournament. The contests under his guidance have become the most publicized of any in the world. Each year finds one that is bigger and better than ever before. Any contest with a piscatorial motif that attracts nearly 170,000 competitors must be good, yet the sixth Annual Greater Miami Fishing Tournament promises to be better than any of the previous five.

From Tommy, a note to the effect that the early season sailfishing off Miami Beach tops anything previously known—that for the past three weeks the edge of the Gulf Stream has been literally filled with the fishes which have made such fishing contests possible. On Friday of last week, 45 charter and private fishing cruisers reported a catch of 135 sailfish.

Due to the fact many of the veterans in the game have arrived for the winter season, at least half of the catch was released. One boat at the Chamber of Commerce docks with two well-known feminine anglers aboard showed five flags, but there was only one fish, hooked deep, brought in.

During the summer months, when many anglers from the far places are fishing for the first time, the kill is often equal to the catch. And, those anglers are not to be censured for killing them, as anglers with several or more to their credit undoubtedly would be were they to continue boating fish day after day. Yes Sir, the day of the grandstand angler is done—the modern angler prouder by far of several flags denoting releases than he ever was for sailfish killed.

Large catches of dolphin are also noted by Tommy, as well as white marlin and a blue marlin that, caught last week, was pushing the record for the southern Florida area. The earliest the jumpers have been caught for many years.

The only much sought-after game-fish anglers have been unsuccessful in boating so far is the Allison tuna. However, three have been hooked, but because it was on light tackle, lost.

So far there has been no news from the "Islands Across the Stream," but that is due to the fact that few boats are there as yet.

Over 200 boats are already registered for the Miami tournament, which this year will get under way January 12 and run for 99 days. Just another indication that this year the contest will be bigger and better than ever.

Utah Guard Gains Honor Berth Again

Rex Geary Chosen To All-Conference Eleven Unanimously

By the Associated Press

Denver, Nov. 27.—Although Utah nailed up its second Big Seven football title in three years this season, its two strongest rivals, Colorado and Denver, won equal representation with the Utes on the Associated Press All-Conference eleven.

Each team gained three positions. Utah nudged out the other two teams by a half-game margin for the title, when Colorado's defending champions and D. U. played a 3-to-3 tie Thanksgiving Day.

One of the two remaining places went to fourth-place Brigham Young and the other to fifth-place Utah State.

Sole unanimous choice of coaches, sports writers and officials who helped pick the team was Rex Geary, Utah's 180-pound, 5-foot 9-inch guard and captain.

The all-star backfield has Sam Sugarman, of Denver, at quarter back; Leo Stasica, of Colorado, and Isadore Spector, of Utah, at halfback, and Paul McClung at fullback.

Repeaters from last year's All-Conference team are Geary, Stasica, who hails from Rockford, Ill.; Murray Maughan, Utah State center, and Wayne Reeve, Brigham Young end.

Stasica led the conference in scoring with ten touchdowns. Sugarman and Stasica were the outstanding defensive backs in the mile-high circuit.

Tunney Pays Fine; Dodges Reporters

Stamford, Conn., Nov. 27 (INS).—Gene Tunney today paid a $15 fine and $7.40 court costs after pleading guilty to a charge of having failed to report the killing of a dog by his automobile.

The former heavyweight boxing champion fled from reporters seeking details of the accident by jumping out a window of the courthouse to the ground 8 feet below.

The dog, a $500 greyhound, belonged to Mrs. W. L. Johnstone, wife of a utility executive.

Washington Eagles Lose To Orioles

Baltimore Sextet Wins, 5-4; Numerous Fights Mark Play

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 27.—In a rough-and-tumble match highlighted by an old-fashioned brawl in the second period, when Washington's Eagles tied the score for the second time, the Baltimore Orioles put on a final record spurt and nosed out the Eagles here tonight, 5 to 4.

A crowd of 2,000 turned out to see the Orioles score in the first two minutes of play and again eight minutes later to snatch a 2-to-0 lead and manage to keep forging ahead as often as the Eagles tied the score.

It was midway of the second period that big John McTeer, Washington's 233-pound defenseman, and Jack Dyte, of Baltimore, started swinging fists just after Norm Burns had tied the score again for the Eagles, 3 to 3.

Orioles Mob McTeer

With the first swing, Orioles swarmed all over McTeer and the action was at full speed when officials stepped in, halted it, and sent McTeer and Dyte to the penalty box.

New Vitarelli, 146-pound winger, stole the show with a pair of goals and two assists, while Burns closely pressed him with two goals and a lone assist.

The Eagles, entering the final period tied, 3 to 3, launched a vigorous protest of the officiating in this session which found them competing with four to five players much of the time because of penalties.

Piche Scores Fifth

It was Vitarelli, who put the Orioles out in front on a pass from Webster at 1:45, and Piche, who cinched the lead when he took the puck from Ripley and converted.

Washington's Goalie Gordon Hemming, who had just made a remarkable save, was piled up on the ice when the Orioles' fifth goal came. A few minutes later, McBride started a Washington rally with a final shot that went into the net at 19:30 on a pass from Burns. But before the Eagles could get started again, the whistle ended the game. The loss brought Washington's record to two defeats against six victories.

Colonials Drill Under Art Zahn, Reinhart Rests

G. W. Prepares for Cage Season; 22 Games Are On Calendar

Coach Bill Reinhart turned the George Washington basketball duties over to Freshman Mentor Arthur Zahn yesterday, as the former wanted a few days' rest between the nine-game football schedule and the coming 22-game court card.

The courtmen have been practicing since November 1, including several practices with the Heurich Brewers, so Reinhart thought this would be a good time for a short trip out of town.

First action on the schedule is against the Oklahoma Aggies December 18 at Riverside Stadium, the new home court of the Colonials.

New Rose Bowl Angle—Stanford Doesn't Want Aggies or Vols

Michigan or Minnesota Preferred By Pasadena Western Candidate

By Jack Guenther,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 27.—A sportswriter needn't read a book to learn that the surest way of losing friends and alienating readers is by meddling in the wonderfully mysterious intrigues of the Rose Bowl, but here comes a report too good to resist—Stanford doesn't incline toward Texas A. & M. or Tennessee.

It wasn't told to us; we only heard it from a source close to a source close to Palo Alto. Our communique infers that Stanford believes it is time the Bowl was returned to its original theme, West vs. East, and not West vs. South. Further, it indictates the invitation will be delayed for several weeks and that the bid eventually may go to a defeated team.

Look to Midwest

Unless you've spent the last six months in Little America, read only Esperanto or took your education at Knoxville or College Station, you can interpret our white paper only one way. For it sums up to a single conclusion—that despite the apparent hopelessness of the task, Stanford still looks to the Middle West, meaning Michigan or Nebraska.

Now consider the circumstances a moment. Boston College is the top team in the East and, having defeated Tulane and Auburn by substantial margins, is a Sugar Bowl natural. But the Eagles are completely unknown on the Coast and must be ranked as dubious draws. Corneli and Penn already have stated they would decline all bids, and Georgetown's best showing was made, after all, in defeat. You can dismiss the East from further reckoning in Pasadena.

Now, in the Southwest there is Texas O. & M., possibly the best football team in the Nation for two straight years. In the South there is Tennessee, undefeated and untied. But there are serious disadvantages on both sides. The Aggies already have appeared in Los Angeles, which actually supports the Bowl, and unfortunately played the dullest game in their past 20 in shading oft-beaten UCLA by a single touchdown.

Best Two Tough Teams

Tennessee really has defeated only two first-rank squads, Duke and Alabama. But what weighs more heavily against the Vols is that they appeared in the Rose game last year and Duke and Alabama—from the same conference—received the bids in 1939 and 1938. Both the natives and the Universities of California feel that too much of the same thing defeats the Bowl's purpose.

C. V. Whitney's Parasang Wins Burch Memorial at Bowie

Halcyon Colt Scores Over Grey Wolf

Jay Jay Is Third In Field of Nine; Winner Pays $14.40, Clocked in 1:13

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., Nov. 27.—The colors of C. V. Whitney, once as much a part of this track as the three-sixteenth pole, came back today in a smahing, driving finish to win the W. P. Burch Memorial Handicap. Parasang, a 3-year-old son of Halcyon, carried the famous light blue and brown cap to victory by a head margin over Mrs. Alice F. Sherman's Grey Wolf. Two lengths farther back came Howard Bruce's Jay Jay to be third in a starting field of nine.

Despite the fact that yesterday's down pour turned the track into a canal, the running surface had a hard bottom and Parasang was clocked in a creditable 1:13, about the average time for the stake. The Whitneyite had only a scattered backing due to two rather ordinary performances and paid a $14.40 mutuel.

Jockey Basil James brought Parasang along in the stretch to dispose of Grey Wolf in the final jumps after the latter had a tough struggle to get to the top inside the sixteenth pole. A crowd of 8,000 witnessed the action and, for the most part, frowned at a series of form reversals, the chief of which was a 12-length victory by George Perry's Mowmart in the third race.

Wood Chopper Takes Lead

Parasang began as if he was the most disinterested party in the field. Jockey James did not hurry him while Wood Chopper, Grey Wolf and Abrasion fought for the pace-making honors. Wood Chopper went to the front and drew clear. Grey Wolf dropped back and it appeared that the front runner might be the winner.

Unknown to the crowd, however, Wood Chopper had suffered a severe leg cut early in the race. He stopped in the stretch and Grey Wolf moved to the front. He appeared headed for the major portion of the purse at the sixteenth pole. But along came Parasang. The Whitneyite responded to the whip of James and drove to Grey Wolf to stick his head in front at the wire.

The race was worth $4,210 to Parasang and grossed $6,100.

McHenry Wins

The favorite players had one of their few chances to cheer in the first race when S. W. Labrot's McHenry, carrying 122 pounds, came with good energy to win the first race under Jockey Johnny Gilbert's handling. B. F. Christmas' Bardy was second with Maigre third in a field of 11. McHenry paid $4.40.

Those who coupled McHenry with J. H. Stotler's Ginobi in the second race, collected a $39.20 pay-off in the daily double. Ginobi came to the wire two lengths ahead of Paper Plate with Pari Ernest in third position. Ginobi paid an individual mutuel of $12.50.

The day's secondary feature, the De Courcy Purse, went to Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Dawn Attack. The son of Mars simply galloped off with the decision. Don Orlan was second and Weatherite was third in the limit field of a dozen. Dawn Attack was not popular in the betting and paid $29.60.

Player Purchased

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP).—The Buffalo Hockey Club of the American League purchased Defenseman Doug Young today from the Montreal Canadiens of the National League, subject to National League waivers.

BARDY was well placed from start, moved up menacingly approaching stretch, but was no match for winner while kept to pressure to end. MAIGRE forced early pace and was strongly handled, but could not stay. LER-LIN closed with good energy. MEMORIST raced on inside and tired.

Selections at Bowie.

Dear Al:

Jockey W. L. Taylor is beginning to feel the sting of being prominent. When he brought Laugh and Play back to be unsaddled after yesterday's fourth race, the booes rang out, not in great volume to be sure, but there could be no mistake about them. But the fans are expecting too much of the youngster. After all, he can't get off and drag them to the wire. I would have liked to have been cut in on that Mowmart killing. For the past several days reports have been around that the horse had everything from the barber's itch to housemaids knee and then he came out to run like Man o' War. He should have been disqualified for winning too far off. You can have Alan Clarke, too, if you know what I mean. Mirsch Jacobs, America's second leading winning trainer, after shipping 13 horses to Hialeah Park, motored to Washington, where he took a plane for Florida. Before leaving, Jacobs filed a stall application with Supt. Dick Pending for the April, 1941, meeting at this track. Harry Guy Bedwell, America's third leading winning trainer, has arranged to ship 24 horses on Sunday to Santa Anita, Calif. Agent Guy Lansford and Jockey Bevers. Hacker will motor to California next Monday. W. H. Denham sold Mama's Boy at private terms to J. M. Manning. Jockey J. Harrell was taken sick yesterday morning. His day's engagements were immediately canceled by Agent Tommy Kelly. Horsemen stabling at the Laurel track, phoned over that the roads leading into the course were flooded, and that they had difficulty in getting to their barns. Frank Blankenship, who handicaps the programs here, and who has been doing excellent work this fall, hit a new high Monday when he picked six of the seven winners. J. W. Y. Martin's Punch Drunk, a starter in yesterday's opener, had the unenviable record of having finished fourth in his six starts. Visitors Tuesday had visions for a time of seeing an all-time Maryland pay-off record being established as Westly, a $556.85 to $1 led to the home-stretch turn. However, the plater stopped suddenly and finished among the "also rans." At the conclusion of the meeting, Jockey Eddie DeCamillis will sojourn to the Susquehanna Flats off the town of Havre de Grace, where he will engage in a bit of duck hunting. He will later go to Florida for the session at Hialeah. Jockey Martin Bletzacker was an arrival from Ohio. He will ride at Charles Town. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Quizzle came from far behind on the outside to nip Quintillian in the final jump last week. Falling into another good spot today, he looks like a good bet. Rough Man turned in a surprise performance to finish third to Pirate and might be tough to beat. High Name should go well.

Second race—Victory Light indicates that he is a superior mud runner when beaten a length by Tuacross over a sloppy track at Pimlico. His best effort figures to win this. Playmore raced well behind High Blame and The Runner last out and shapes up as the one to beat. Lauerman has a good money chance.

Third race—Cheer Me showed good speed at Pimlico going a mile and a sixteenth but failed to stave off the late bid of Broiler and was contens with second place. Going a shorter route today, he might stick it out. Madly is another early speedster but becames faint hearted under pressure. Circus Wings was a good winner in New England and is not out of the contention

Fourth race—Scaramouch was no match for Sailor King at this distance last start but managed to save second money. Being more cheaply placed here, he receives top figure. Tempest was off slowly last start which accounted for a mediocre performance. He gets a good figure off general form. Arestino for show.

Fifth race—The Bedwell entry of Rawson and Jessie Gladys each have sufficient speed and class to turn back the select band of sprinters in this heat. Williamstown has shown speed at times but late form has not been impressive. Court Dance displayed a good effort in his last.

Sixth race—Housework, under a capable ride from W. L. Taylor, showed the way home to Play House, General Mowlee and Iron Shot in his last, completing the mile and a sixteenth in 1:47 4-5. She should encounter stout opposition from Lumiere but figures give her a decided edge. General Mowlee might Seventh race—Histronic put up a game fight to earn third place back of Maecloud last outing. He meets a speedy band of routers in this number but appears equal to the task. The Queen loves the Bowie strip and would be tough to beat should she run with her old-time speed. Indomitable has class and could surprise.

Best bet—Bedwell entry.

Eddie Goldberg's Clarendon Team

(Note: This is the fifth picture in a series of ten devoted to the Ladies' District League. The Ladies' District League is composed of the leading women duckpin bowlers of Washington and vicinity and many of them have national ranking as recognized by the National Duck Pin Congress, whose headquarters are in Washington.)

MILLIE GINGELL, who has the highest average on the quintet, now 110; considered by her team captain to be a real star and to be heard from; is single; has spent three years in Ladies' District loop.

ALMA MEHLER, rolling for the first time in the Ladies' District; has 107 average, married, pretty and has nice smile, also rolls in a Silver Spring league, loves to bowl and enters tournaments where she usually places in the money.

POLLY SHUGRUE, captain of the team, who has spent 10 years in the Ladies' District League; her current average is 104; was once eighteenth in national ranking and high in District; loves all her "girls" and constantly encourages them; a good leader.

Jersey Track At Monmouth Approved

By the United Press

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 27.—Establishment of New Jersey's first horse-racing track with pari-mutuel betting on the Elkwood Park site near Long Branch got under way today when Fred H. Ryan, secretary of the racing commission, announced the Securities Exchange Commission had approved financing plans of the Monmouth Park Racing Association.

The Monmouth Park Association headed by Amory L. Haskell, Red Bank, was given a conditional license by the racing commission last August. The license became effective with SEC approval.

Ryan said the track operators plan to issue 200,000 shares of stock at $10 per share to provide a maximum capitalization of $2,000,000 but shareholders are limited to 175 and must be approved by the commission.

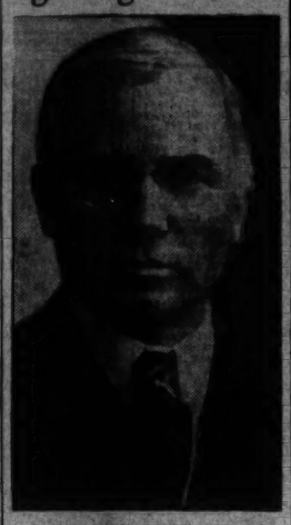
Plea to Retire Again Ignored



DANIEL WILLARD

Willard, 79, Reelected as B. & O. Head

Directors Turn Down Retirement Plea of Rail President

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 27.—Daniel Willard, near the age of 80, was reelected president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad today after the directors had turned down his suggestion that he retire to make way for a younger man.

The white-haired dean of railroad executives, who has spent 60 years in the industry was chosen the operating head of the B. & O. for the thirty-first time.

He became president in 1910 and now holds the record for the longest term of service as head of the B. & O., oldest steam railroad in the country.

Although Willard is brisk and vigorous in carrying out his executive activities, railroad circles speculated on the possibility that he might step out as president next January when he becomes 80 years old.

Many had expected some announcement along that line would be made today. However, after an unusually long board meeting, the directors made the usual announcement of the reelection of officers, including Willard.

New Lackawanna Head

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—William White, who started as a clerk with the Erie Railroad in 1913, became one of the youngest railroad presidents in the country today when he was elected executive head of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western.

Stockily built, White, who is 43, moves to the top as successor to John M. Davis, who resigned at 69 to become chairman of the board of the Lackawanna.

Since 1938, White has been vice president and general manager of the Virginian Railway, with headquarters at Norfolk. He is due to take up his duties with the Lackawanna January 1.

The board of managers of the Lackawanna announced Davis, president since 1925, "has requested that he be relieved of the responsibilities of that office" and that his resignation had been accepted "with regret," effective January 1.

A native of Midland Park, N. J., White entered the employ of the Erie in the auditing office at New York and spent most of his rail career with the Erie, both in the East and on Western divisions. He rose to general manager of the Eastern district before he shifted to the Virginian as general manager.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—Cotton futures dropped 2 to 14 points today as market apprehension mounted over the possibility President Roosevelt's statement that nondefense expenditures would be cut might affect the Administration's farm program.

The distant October delivery showed most pronounced weakness. Nearer months were held up by mill price fixing and trade covering.

Prices started upward, aided by higher cables from abroad, but New Orleans operators soon turned to the selling side and the decline gathered momentum as the market watched securities and most other commodities go down.

Demand for textiles in Worth Street continued to center on heavy goods at firm and unchanged prices.

Stocks Slump $1 to $3 as New Qualms Arise on British Urgings for U. S. Aid

New York, Nov. 27.—The stock market broke out of its lethargy of the past few days with a decisive slump today. Losses of 1 to 3 points were numerous at the finish, particularly in steels, aircrafts and miscellaneous industrials. This was the sharpest setback since the post-election selling wave of November 6.

Brokerage circles said the selling seemed to generate chiefly in professional trading circles and to reflect disappointment over the market's inability to advance lately.

Some market analysts, however, saw in the adverse price trend fresh worries over possible new repercussions upon the United States from the world crisis. These qualms presumably arose from acknowledgement in British circles of heavy shipping losses and industry damage, coupled with new urgings of American aid.

The selling in shares was of comparatively modest proportions, although the turnover of 843,300 shares was the largest in nearly a fortnight.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dropped .8 of a point to 43.7, where it was the lowest since mid-September, and as much as 6.8 points under the level of a year ago, despite the big increase in industrial production and corporate profits in the past 12 months.

Failure of the market to reflect the upswing in business, Wall Street analysts said, was the result of the uneasiness over the future of the world and Uncle Sam's part in it. Higher taxes to pay for the huge armament program, and possibility of higher costs, and new Government control measures to speed defense, they said, made investors wary. A stock exchange membership sold for only $33,000, lowest since 1899.

At the same time, earnings reports and a flood of year-end dividend announcements provided a bright picture of the industrial profits trend of the recent past. Westinghouse ordered a disbursement of $1 on the common shares, bringing the total for the year to $4.75 a share, compared with $3.50 in 1939. Great Northern, however, in ordering its first dividend since the $2 payment in 1937, placed it at only 50 cents and Wall Street had been inclined to look for a duplication of the 1937 disbursement. The stock dropped 3½ points.

Other news included announcement by Secretary Knox that $50,000,000 of defense funds had been allocated to development of naval bases acquired from England. The British trade report for October, showed imports had risen to about $340,000,000, while exports dropped off to only $93,000,000.

Among stocks down 2 to 3 points were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas, Westinghouse, American Can, Allied Chemical and Chrysler while those off a point or so included American Telephone, Boeing, Martin, Anaconda, Pennsylvania and others.

In the curb prices also declined, with Aluminum Co. off more than 3, and Gulf Oil, Jones & Laughlin, Creole Petroleum and Colt Firearms off 1 to 2. Sales totaled 190,000 shares.

United States Governments developed stout resistance to a bond market selling movement today which carried most corporate groups well down from previous closing levels.

Independent strength of the Federals was attributed by dealers to absence of important offerings. On small turnover Treasury loans showed gains ranging from 1-32d to 2-32d points. The latter rise, uncommon in the Governments, in which narrow changes are the rule, went to the credit of Treasury 3½s of 1949-52, which had been untraded in the stock exchange since October 26.

British Report Rise in Imports, Drop in Exports

London, Nov. 27 (AP).—October reports, reflecting increased effort by England to arm, defend and feed the homeland, totaled £85,095,565, an increase of £4,463,542 over September and an increase of £23,224,165 over October, 1939, the British Board of Trade announced today.

Also because of the war effort exports for October, totaling £23,390,911, were a decrease of £7,786,379, compared with September, when the "blitz" started, and a decrease of £1,231,929 from October last year. It was explained that raw materials, plants and labor were being conserved for domestic munitions production.

Nevertheless, export figures for the first ten months of 1940 were more favorable than in 1939—£366,995,190, or an increase of £5,671,020. Imports for the January-October period were £953,724,986, or an increase of £236,485,541 over the like 1939 period.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 27 (AP).—An early break today carried wheat prices down 1⅝@1⅞ cents to the lowNeat level since before the post election "inflation" bulge and the market spent the rest of the session trying to regain lost ground.

Sellers crowded the pit during the first 10 minutes. Orders inspired by weakness of securities, good moisture over much of the winter wheat belt and lagging flour demand touched off a barrage of sales. Liquidation that was not checked until December wheat had toppled to 86⅛ and May to 85⅝.

When this liquidation had been digested the market staged a slow rally as a result of reinstatement of accounts and scattered buying based on availability of only small commercial supplies. Wheat closed ⅛@¾ lower than yesterday, December, 88@87⅞; May, 86⅝@86¼. Corn was ¼ lower to ⅛ higher; December, 63⅛@63¼; May, 63¼@62⅞; oats, ⅛@¼ higher; soy beans, ⅛@¼ down; rye, ⅝@⅞ lower, and lard, unchanged to 3 lower.

Some buying on the rally was attributed to mills but no material flour business could be confirmed. Traders asserted December contracts on which delivery must be made next month, represent a cheaper purchase than comparable spot market grades.

TVA Earns $4,023,000 In 12 Months

Comptroller Claims Consumers Saved $9,000,000 on Rates

By the Associated Press

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 27.—The Tennessee Valley's publicly owned electric systems, distributing cheap TVA electricity, earned an aggregate net income of $4,023,000 during the past fiscal year, the Tennessee Valley Authority reported today.

The combined net income, the authority said, was 18½ per cent of the combined gross revenues of $21,624,000 and was earned after payment of expenses, including $1,638,000 in taxes and tax equivalents.

The report, from the TVA comptroller, said consumers of 106 municipal and cooperative electric systems saved "more than $9,000,000" annually through cheap electric rates.

The State's four large municipally owned systems, Memphis, Nashville, Chattanooga and Knoxville, had a combined net income of $2,751,000 or 20 per cent of gross revenues totaling $13,656,000, the report showed, while the remaining 70 municipal systems had combined net income of $1,160,000, or 21 per cent of gross revenues totaling $5,483,000.

"Six of these 70 municipalities with gross revenues of $101,600," said TVA, "showed a combined net loss of $18,000 for the year. Most of these six small systems were in a development stage of operations or were operating competitive systems."

The valley's 32 cooperative associations reported a combined net income of $112,000 out of gross revenues totaling $2,485,000. Seventeen had a combined net income of $261,000, while the remaining 15 showed a combined net loss of $149,000.

The comptroller pointed out that the income of the systems "

Southern Girls Meet In Special Match On Variety Program; Tasker Comes Back

Bearded villians and Southern belles will work in the rope-enclosed area of Turner's Arena tonight in Promoter Joe Turner's latest variety wrestling show.

Milo Steinborn, the Memphis muscle man, will swap groans with Rudy Dusek in the featured match, while Carole Starr, who rushed up from New Orleans for the occasion, meets Hazel Forbes, of Bumin'ham, sub, in a special attraction.

Miss Starr says her Southern lady rasslers' championship will be at stake, and the winner will meet Mildred Burke, world's leading female wrestler.

The bearded gentleman on tonight's program is Tiger Tasker. The Tiger will meet Carl Gray. Eddie Newman and Herbie Freeman clash with Warren Bockwinkle and Abe Yourist in a two-man team bout, and Lou Plummer meets Emil Dusek in the 30-minute semifinal. The slaughter begins at 8:30 p. m.

will be $3, it was stated, and prices will level to $1.

The Georgetown squad, which broke training following last Saturday's game with George Washington, will report to Coach Jack Hagerty on Monday to resume drills. Hagerty minimized the effects of the week's layoff, declaring "our boys never let themselves get very much out of shape."

Georgetown officials indicated that the Hoya squad would leave Washington approximately on December 13, taking the Southern route to the West Coast and stopping for practice at various points in the Southwest.

Twice Won Sugar Bowl Game

Santa Clara, coached by silver-haired Buck Shaw, has commanded national football notice for the past half dozen years and twice has been a victorious contender in the Sugar Bowl. In 1937 and 1938 the Broncos defeated Louisiana State.

Georgetown's record of only one defeat in three seasons is closely approached by Santa Clara, which has lost only two games in two years. In 1939, the Broncos' only defeat was at the hands of unbeaten Texas A. and M. by a 7-to-3 score. Except for the one-point defeat by Stanford, the only mark against Santa Clara's 1940 record is a scoreless tie with Michigan State. The Broncos, who use the Notre Dame system, are a big team that also boasts speed. Their line averages 200 pounds from end to end and they have a versatile back in big Jim Johnson.

Santa Clara opened this season with a 34-to-3 victory over Utah and, in succession, defeated U. C. L. A. 9-6; lost to Stanford, 7-6; tied Michigan State, 0-0; defeated San Francisco, 27-0; triumphed over St. Mary's (conqueror of Fordham), 19-7, and beat Loyola, 26-0. They will close their regular season on Saturday against a weak Oklahoma team.

Army Has an All-American, But He Doesn't Help Team

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 28.—If Army should lose to Navy in the annual clash of the two Service elevens this Saturday at Philadelphia, the Cadets might be justified in blaming it on a regulation.

For Carl Columbus Hinkle, jr., possibly the nearest thing a "one-man team" in the Academy, will watch the big game from the bench—just as he has been forced to watch every game for the last two seasons.

Cadet Hinkle is the same Hinkle who played enough center for Vanderbilt University back in 1937 to be named on practically every All-America team in the land, including that of the Associated Press. He was 200 pounds of ripping, tearing lineman for the Commodores, and Army's hearts jumped a beat when he passed up professional football to enter the Academy.

Rule Interfered

But 1938 was the year that West Point chose to invoke its "three-year rule." When Cadet Hinkle showed up, he learned that no player who had served three years of varsity competition, including time on college teams before entering the Military Academy, was eligible for Army's eleven. That, of course, washed up his football career.

If it was hard on Hinkle, it was hard on Army's football followers, too. Things have not gone too well with the Cadets lately—especially this season—and a man like Hinkle bolstering the center of the line could have made a tremendous difference.

Hinkle Unworried

But Hinkle hasn't let it get him down. He intended primarily to become an Army officer, anyway, and he has satisfied his love of football partially by coaching the plebe team. He sits on the bench at every game and helps Bill Gillis, Army's center and captain, make every tackle. He's exhausted at the finish.

"I miss all that football is and all that it stands for," he says. "But I do get some satisfaction from seeing the men I have coached play good ball. I feel I am helping West Point at least a little."

Zivic's Pilot Hurt In Auto Accident

By the Associated Press

Erie, Pa., Nov. 27.—Luke Carney, of Pittsburgh, manager of Fritzie Zivic, welterweight boxing champion, and three associates were injured today when the car in which they were riding skidded and struck a pole near Northeast, Pa., about 15 miles from here.

Carney suffered injuries to both knees and a possible fracture of the wrist. Bobby Quinn, Zivic's trainer; Sammy Parrotto, a stablemate of the champion, and Benny Winters, all of Pittsburgh, were bruised and shaken up.

They were returning to Pittsburgh from Buffalo, N. Y., where Zivic defeated Ronnie Beaudin, of Toronto, in a boxing bout last night.

Zivic took a train home and escaped the accident. He had wanted to motor back, but Carney, eyeing the snow-covered roads, told him:

One Change Likely In Army Line-up

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP).—Coach Bill Wood, of Army, hinted at only one change in his starting lineup against Navy as his squad practiced for more than two hours indoors today after the first snowfall of the season in the Hudson Valley.

The pending shift, Wood said, is the replacement of the veteran Ted Michel at left tackle by Ralph White, junior from Kingsport, Tenn. Wood added that he was impressed by White's showing in Army's past few games and at this week's practice drills.

At the same time, Wood spiked unofficial rumors that he would start as many seniors as possible against Navy for "sentimental reasons."

"Only the 11 best men will be used at the outset, and that means pretty much the same that started against Princeton last week," he said.

Members of the Plebe and "B" squads furnished the opposition this afternoon in an hour's drill of defensive formations against Navy plays.

Boston, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Atlantic City Sea Gulls burned the Boston Olympics deeper in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League cellar tonight by overcoming a wide lead and gaining a 6-4 victory before a 7,000 crowd at the Boston garden.

The Olympics wound up the first period leading 3-1, and then became careless. During the second frame, the Sea Gulls tallied four times, Don Vigel denting the Boston twine twice in 32 seconds to clinch the game.

On the Line With Considine

and more years ago. It was slipshod, slambang stuff in those days, compared to now. But the rewards for the moderns won't be the same. This is where big league baseball is smart. It may never happen that another big leaguer will hit Babe Ruth's high water mark of 60,000 in a single season. But the mark is always there to shoot at. Somebody might make it. It isn't illegal.

The average sports customers is charmed by the flashing of numerals and ciphers in his face. That was a subtle but definite part of Babe's drawing ability—the fact that he made so darn much money. A lot of guys got a kick out of going out to a park just to boo a fellow who made perhaps eighty times as much as they.

The big arenas which need hockey in order to survive are pretty lucky to have it. It is a Canadian game, and Canada is at war. The Canadian government let the eligible players serve a couple of weeks in camp, and then let them go about their business—their business being the bringing of ready cash into Canada. The single men are permitted to spend only $25 a week in the United States; $50 a week for the married players. It might have been that there would be no hockey, and that would have put the arenas in a hell of a fix, for you can pay off a lot of bills with 24 nights of hockey—or 48 nights in New York, where there are two teams. That the crowds have been so-so and the popular interest next to nil is the fault of the men who run the game. They have purposely bled the sweat, the grime, the scars and the individual souls out of the sport—to save a few lousy bucks a year in salaries. And now they wonder why the anemic remainder is drawing only the incorrigible citizens who would go to see a hockey match between an umbrella stand and a wooden Indian.

Listen! with Glynn

(WJSV Announcer Joe King pinch-hits today for Paul Glynn).

Some years ago I had my fling—at short story writing. It doesn't follow that this shall be a success story, for today I am retained as a radio announcer, not as a writer. One thing I learned, however; never write about something of which you know nothing.

That being the case—I shall talk shop. About what? Why WJSV's announcers, of course.

Take Hugh Conover now—hooks rugs, he does! Builds rock gardens, too—and goes a'golfin'.

Our staff cosmopolite, Reg Allen, has a penchant for listening to symphony records. He never buys these, however. Instead has a great collection of ancient recordings of the "beat me daddy" type.

Now Lee Vickers can find more distressing noises in the motor of his Studebaker than could a master mechanic. When not on the road to or from Durham, can be found in any downtown garage raving at a mechanic.

Any hobbies Charlie Daly may have had in the past, have been put aside for his new passion—Catching Trains. Of late, it's been one train after the other for Charlie, who has been rather consistently on the heels of a certain prominent figure.

When Gunnar Back can come out of a new book—he reviews them, you know—he takes an occasional canter in nearby Virginia.

As for me, my knuckles are too sore to write further. I have just taken on a new hobby—Cabinet Making. Ouch—my thumb!

The Post Radio Time Table

9:15 a. m., WRC—The Christmas Seals campaign of the District Tuberculosis Association will benefit during Mary Mason's program when the D'Artagnan Club offers a playlet timely to the season, "Jack Stark, Football Star."

7:30 p. m., WJSV—From "somewhere in Canada," Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth talk with officers and men of Canadian regiments. Their Vox Pop mike is expected to reveal that many of the men will soon be leaving for Britain.

8, WRC—Meredith Willson composed the music for the new Chaplin film, "The Great Dictator," but tonight he slips back into the American groove with "Turkey in the Straw," because Fanny "Snooks" Brice insists that this, too, is Thanksgiving Day.

8:15, WOL—Cantor Shapiro, long a Sunday morning feature of this station, inaugurates an additional series of quarter-hour programs devoted to Hebrew melodies and folk songs. This in no way affects the Cantor's Sunday program.

8:30, WJSV—Had that much-talked-of tunnel been completed under the English Channel, the history of the evacuation of Flanders might have been somewhat different. The story of this astonishing engineering plan is revived on Strange As It Seems.

9, WRC—Charles Boyer, Minerva Pious (who seems to be a radio comedienne), Tommy Dorsey and Connie Boswell are the features of Bing Crosby's night life.

9:35, WMAL—H. G. Wells, Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, and Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University and former Secretary of the Interior, discuss "What Kind of World Order Do We Want?" on America's Town Meeting of the air.

Fame, Obscurity Vie In Unique Art Show

U. S. Sponsors Sale Of 600 Watercolors In Procurement Hall

Running the gamut rrom dreamy landscapes to comical sideshow scenes, a unique art exhibition opened here yesterday.

It is unique, this show which was launched upon a three-week "run" on the fourth floor of the Procurement Division building at Seventh and D Streets Southwest, for several reasons.

One, there is no varying price scale, each of the 600 watercolors that make up the exhibition bearing a $30 price tag.

Two, artists who aren't known outside their houses are competing for buyers on even terms with painters who possess national reputations.

And, three, the pictures can be bought on almost any terms the purchaser suggests, every penny going to the artist.

Scheduled to continue for three weeks, if the pictures last that long, the show is an offshoot of the national competition which the Government's section of fine arts conducted for the purpose of decorating the Federal leprosarium at Carville, La., and 26 Marine hospitals throughout the land.

Jurors last week picked the 300 watercolors which the Government will buy for the hospitals, at $30 each, and then set aside 600 more for the public sales show which opened yesterday. Within an hour 15 pictures were sold and almost as many reserved, pending consultations with wives or husbands at home.

Well-known artists who are represented include Boardman Robinson, who did the portrait murals in the Department of Justice Building; Angelo and Biagio Pinto, the Philadelphia brother team; Nicolai Cikovsky, of the Corcoran School of Art; Chaim Gross, best known as a sculptor, and Anne Poor, daughter of the muralist, Henry Varnum Poor.

Among the "early birds" who came yesterday for first pick were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Supreme Court Justice; Frederick A. Delano, uncle of President Roosvelt, and Duncan Phillips, head of the Phillips Memorial Gallery.

There was more than one "I saw it first" controversy, in bargain-counter style. When a picture was sold, it was replaced by one from the reserve bins.

Observers noted the absence of social significance in the subject matter. Instead of breadlines, the watercolors depict flower vases. There is no "stark realism," but plenty of nostalgic harbor scenes, colorful circus performers, bucolic impressions and hopeful fishermen.

U. S. Prisoner Asks Release to Fight For Native Greece

John Philip Spanos, whose native Greece sent him back to America for trial for fraud in 1937, sought release from Atlanta Penitentiary yesterday so he could go home to fight the Italian invaders.

Spanos was accused of leadership in a gang which stole and sold $4,000,000 worth of bonds. A New York Federal court sentenced him to prison for two and a half years and he will soon be eligible for parole.

Blocking his parole and deportation to Greece, however, is a detainer lodged by Washington authorities in 1938 after Spanos was indicted here in connection with a sale of stolen bonds.

Parley to Take Up Static From Medical Equipment

By James D. Secrest

Federal Communications Commission engineers tomorrow will reverse their customary tactics in dealing with radio interference and tackle a known cause of faulty reception with kid gloves.

For years they have known that electro-medical apparatus used by the medical profession in the treatment of human ills often causes interference in radio transmission. The interference, moreover, is not restricted to the locality of the diathermy equipment but often travels thousands of miles to do its damage.

Realizing that this interference cannot be abruptly eliminated, the FCC has called an informal engineering conference in the office of its chief engineer, E. K. Jett, for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The objective of the parley will be to effect an agreement on the use of particular frequencies which will not interfere with normal radio transmission. Engineering standards also will be proposed to govern the manufacture of the diathermy equipment.

"The interference caused by diathermy equipment," Jett explained, "appears in a class of its own.

"Transmissions from these machines are capable of being received across the continent and even across the ocean. The frequencies upon which they operate are used by the national defense and safety services. Interruptions of these services may jeopardize life or property, or seriously affect the Nation's interests."

Jett pointed out that the Inter-American radio communications arrangement, signed at Santiago in 1940, recognized that the high-frequency electromedical apparatus has an important place in therapeutics, surgery and industry.

Delegates at the conferences agreed, however, that the respective countries should adopt measures to halt or alleviate interference caused by the medical machines. The problem also was considered at the Inter-American Radio Conference in Havana in 1937.

Because of the international aspect of the problem, the assigning of certain frequencies to the machines by this country will not wholly solve the problem. Diathermy machines in Mexico or Canada, for example, cause interference with reception in the United States and vice versa.

Jett said that the FCC has had the cooperation of the medical profession, the manufacturers of the apparatus, and other interested parties in its efforts to find a solution to the problem.

Doctors, Ill, Lack Patience, Says Physician

Make Poor Stroke Patients, Dr. Freeman Tells Medical Group

By Gerald G. Gross

This may be heresy but—

Doctors make the worst paralytic stroke patients, as far as obeying their own doctors' orders is concerned, a member of the profession confessed last night.

"Physicians who have cerebral accidents are especially hard to influence, since they know more than is good for them," Dr. Walter Freeman, Washington brain surgeon, told the District Medical Society.

Speaking on the topic, "The Patient Has a Stroke," Dr. Freeman emphasized that utter rest is absolutely essential for the first several days at least, the length depending on the seriousness of the attack.

The more cooperative the patient, the better his chances of recovering with minimum disability, he said. Age also was held to be an important factor, the younger victim having the advantage.

There are almost as many different kinds of personality reactions to paralytic strokes caused by cerebral hemorrhage or thrombosis as there are sufferers, according to Dr. Freeman. Some patients actually seem to enjoy their condition, due to the enforced rest it brings, and others are constantly battling doctors, nurses, relatives, friends—everybody and everything.

Between these extremes there is the patient who becomes despondent because of his helplessness, the one who underestimates the seriousness of his plight, etc., Dr. Freeman said.

While it is unusual for a stroke victim to make a 100 per cent recovery, with no physical impairment whatever, any number of them are able to resume useful lives, he pointed out.

Pasteur, for instance, made most of his important discoveries after losing the use of an arm to paralysis, Dr. Freeman said.

On the dark side, he said that while few cerebral strokes are immediately fatal, many attacks are so severe that early death or total invalidism are inevitable.

"I have at times regretted that the life-saving measures applied were so effective in bringing back to consciousness a hopeless invalid, paralyzed and aphasic, when allowing nature to take its course would have seemed the kindest thing to do," Dr. Freeman declared.

"On the other hand, the pledge of our calling demands that we shall do everything in our power to prolong life, as long as there is hope."

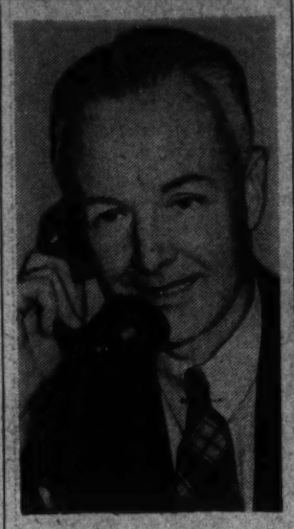
Guy W. Pearson Appointed District Collector of Taxes

Succeeds Towers, Who Is Retiring; Lumpkins Gets Engineering Job



GUY PEARSON
Receiving Congratulations by Phone

Guy W. Pearson yesterday was named collector of taxes of the District to succeed Chatham M. Towers, whose retirement papers are now awaiting action by the District Commissioners.

Chief clerk of the engineering department since 1935, Pearson served with the Army from 1917 to 1919, advancing to second lieutenant in the Engineer Corps. He also saw service in the Air Corps.

Porter M. Lumpkins, chief clerk of the highway department, was promoted to Pearson's job by the Commissioners.

Pearson, the new collector, is 44 years old, married and resides at 4025 Nineteenth Street Northwest. He was born in Springville, Ala., May 8, 1896. He began his employment with the District in January, 1916, as a draftsman with the sewer department at $1.50 a day.

After the war, he returned to the District as chief draftsman with the sewer department and was later made special assistant to J. B. Gordon, sanitary engineer. His salary was raised from $4,600 to $5,600.

Lumpkins, 38, has been on the District pay roll 12 years. He resides at 3747 W Street, is married and has one son. His first job with the municipal government was as a cost accountant with the highway department. He was appointed chief clerk in 1930 and continued to perform the duties of accountant. His salary was raised from $2,900 to $4,600.

Towers, who has reached the age of 70, has requested retirement as of November 30. His office at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic was recently the subject of an investigation by a special board of inquiry. The board found $2,025 in shortages which was laid to an inadequate collection system.

Defense Slowed By State Barriers, Truckers Claim

By the Associated Press

American Trucking Association, Inc., criticized yesterday what it called "interference with the preparedness program by trade barriers" and asked that Congress enact legislation to permit elimination of State "bottlenecks which are strangling interstate commerce."

The association, which outlined its views in a brief filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, also called "fee-splitting justices of the peace a national scandal."

The Interstate Commerce Commission has under consideration the question of whether there should be Federal regulations of sizes and weights of motor vehicles operating in interstate commerce.

The association, while opposed to national uniformity in State size and weight laws, urged that the I. C. C. be given authority to hear trade barrier complaints from shippers, carriers or other interested groups. It said many State laws restricting truck sizes and loads were designed primarily to diver traffic from highways to the railroads.

Morgenthau Back From Caribbean

Attorney Demands Bar Group Move Its Law Library

Ouster of the District Bar Association law library from its rent-free quarters at Judiciary Square was sought yesterday by Attorney James J. Laughlin.

Laughlin called upon District Attorney Edward M. Curran to file the ancient action of "quo warranto" to require the association to show by what authority its library is housed in the District Courthouse.

Laughlin pointed out that the building is public property. Nevertheless, he asserted, the association restricts use of the library to its members.

Unless Curran has filed suit by December 4, Laughlin said he would start proceedings in his own name. In a letter to Attorney General Jackson, Laughlin asserted that the removal would make it possible for three justices now quartered in the Police Court Building to hold court in their own building.
